Palace Is Bombed; 20 Killed

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — A Cambodian Air Force T28 fighter dropped two bombs on the presidential palace today, killing at least 20 persons and injuring dozens more. President Lon Nol, the apparent target of the bombing attack, declared a state of emergency, the first step in turning the government over to military control.

The plane, which Lon Nol said was piloted by the son-in-law of deposed leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk, aimed the bombs at the palace where Lon Nol resides, but hit an adjacent palace guard barracks.

Black smoke poured over the capital as screaming soldiers, their wives and children—many of them wounded—fled into the streets. At least 36 persons were injured.

Western diplomats said Lon Nol's declaration of a state of emergency freed him to turn over full control of the government to the military.

He suspended four articles of the constitution—those allowing for freedom of speech, association and the press, and article 11, the inviolability of domicile.

Immediately after the 250 pound bombs exploded at 1.30 p.m., military police cordonned off all roads leading south towards the palace. Diplomats living in luxurious villas surrounding the palace grounds were evacuated, and the nearby American embassy was cordonned off and put on full alert as the lone pilot continued low runs over the area for an hour.

Nol was not injured in the attack. He went on national radio a few hours later and announced that "special security measures" would be enforced throughout the nation.

The ailing 59-year-old president described the attack as "a clear attempt to kill me personally" and blamed it on Capt. So Potra, a former Air Force pilot and son-in-law of exiled Cambodian leader Prince Sihanouk, now in Peking.

The attack came on the third

Butler On Way Home From Clark

CLARK AIR BASE, Philippines (UPI) — Sixty elated former American POWs, one of them a mysterious civilian who kissed the American flag before a stunned crowd of 200 well-wishers, flew home today in three separate airplanes.

The men, released earlier this week in Hanoi, flew from this "Operation Homecoming" base in groups of 20 for family reunions at bases across the United States.

One of them, Capt. William Butler of San Rafael, is expected home tomorrow.

The homeward bound men left 82 other freed POWs who reached freedom this week, including two pilots held by China and 32 POWs held by the Viet Cong. The men freed by the Viet Cong arrived here only Friday night and will probably start returning home Monday.

The first giant C141 Starlifter that left today is expected to arrive about 5:15 p.m. EST at Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington. The second plane is scheduled to arrive at Maxwell Air Force Base in Alabama at 6:30 p.m. EST and the third is to touch down at

PRIMER FOR SURVIVORS

Changes In Last Rites Reflect New Attitudes

By JEFF GREER
(Last of six articles)

Today's changes in funeral and burial styles reflect new attitudes of both the dying and the survivors.

For some persons, eliminating "the fuss" and expense of dying creates new stresses, according to those who serve the survivors.

One example is a pendulum swing in the popularity of funeral flowers. Ten years ago, the florist trade suffered because of a trend to charitable contributions in memory of the dead. Obituary notices often read, "please omit flowers".

Relatives and friends, chilled by coffins bare of flowers, sometimes rushed out "to get anything" that could relieve the bleakness, florists reported.

Flowers have returned to funerals, but graceful informal arrangements kept fresh in water have replaced the fast-wilting floral crosses, "broken wheels" and the costly floral emblems sent by fraternal orders and clubs. Potted plants are used frequently, then taken home by the survivors.

"Ten years ago, a funeral director wouldn't have accepted these. . . they weren't dignified enough," one San Rafael florist said of his arrangements.

A simple funeral spray costs $10 and up. All flowers are scarce and costly in the Bay Area now because of last December's deadly freeze.

Many florists display an elaborate book to help choose funeral flowers. It begins with a colored photo of a coffin on a bier. Plastic overlays are added to show the appearance of the traditional spray on the casket or other arrangements.

Florists wouldn't talk of their feelings about competition from memorial donations in lieu of flowers. But groups such as the American Cancer Society, research foundations, humane societies and others enjoy important income from the contributions.

Many charities tell the dead person's family the names of donors but not the amount — thus making all memorial gifts of equal emotional value to the survivors.

Fraternal organizations are less obvious at Marin funerals than formerly. Clubs and lodges increasingly are restricting tribute to dead members to individual attendance at funerals or to memorial services at meetings.

Advisers often caution the average, small Marin family — that has lived here only a few years and has few social ties — against elaborate funerals.

Rev. Edward Dingberg, pastor of St. Isabella's Catholic Church in Terra Linda, explained that "if only 10 people turn up" for a full-scale funeral "it can leave the family feeling even more alone."

Other clergymen said they frequently suggest minimizing funeral and burial rites in favor of a memorial service later, when more relatives and friends can participate.

The decline of ritual sometimes deprives survivors of a chance to share their emotions openly and healthily. The toll has become so great — particularly among children — that the Marin Community Mental Health Center has launched a new attack on the problem.

It's called the "mourning project" or "object loss program," according to Dr. Nicholas Nichols. Like psychiatrist William M. Lamers Jr., quoted earlier in this series, Nicholas believes "funerals are good for people."

Refusal to mourn openly may be an irrational attempt to deny the actual death of a loved one, Nichols said. He cautioned against trying to shield children from a death in the family or from seeing that adults may be sad about it.

The mourning project is available to children and parents of any family in Marin, Nichols said.

Interviews with distressed children and adults often reveal reactions of guilt or anger at the beginning. As the survivor comes to better grips with the problems, feelings of grief, sadness, and eventually an interest in "planning to live again" usually surface, Nichols said.

The mourning project is less oriented to help older couples split by death. The mental health center will work with lonely older survivors on an individual basis, Nichols said.

One recently widowed woman said she received much emotional support from friends at

Motive Of Crime Uncertain

By PAT ANGLE

A "quiet, clean-cut" Mill Valley man was arrested today in connection with yesterday's shotgun slayings of a Mill Valley couple and a son.

Brent William Bedayan, 22, was apprehended by police, some clad in riot gear, about 12:30 a.m. when he returned to rented room in which he lived in a vine-covered house at 124 West Blithedale Avenue.

The former College of Marin student was booked into Marin County Jail on suspicion of the murders of Melvin J. Schallock, 61; his wife, Ruth E., 56, and of of their three sons, Daniel, 19. The three were found shot to death outside their house at 217 Summit Avenue, which had been set afire by the killer.

Officers had staked out Bedayan's residence from neighbors' backyards after friends of young Schallock told investigators that the teen-aged victim and Bedayan had had "a falling out of some type" recently.

Chief William Walsh said the tall, slender young man surrendered quietly and without a struggle.

"He apparently heard us rushing the house and came to the front door and looked out rather curiously," the chief said. "He made no attempt to resist arrest."

Walsh said a .12-gauge shotgun found in the house where Bedayan lived, along with "an awful lot of other evidence," had been turned over to the state Crime Laboratory in Sacramento. He declined to specify the nature of the other items given to the lab.

The chief also refused to speculate on a motive for the killings and would say only that the reported bad feeling between Bedayan and young Schallock "had been brewing for some time."

"There apparently had been an argument or a difference of opinion for some time," Walsh said. "But it didn't appear it was the kind that would have led to this type of retaliation."

He said investigators had not determined the cause of the split, but that it apparently had not involved drugs or women.

Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Gales said today he had learned that Bedayan and Schallock had been "friends at one time." But he said "differences arose" between the pair and noted that Bedayan had threatened his former friend within the past several months.

Bales also said that a search of Bedayan's car, which had been left overnight in Blithedale canyon on the night of the murder, produced evidence that the man had purchased 12-gauge shotgun shells recently.

Walsh described Bedayan as "clean-cut and quiet, a polite, calm individual." He said the man was "very cooperative" to police instructions following his arrest, but did little talking and

Suspect In Mill Valley Murders Called Mysterious By Neighbors

By JEFF GREER

Brent W. Bedayan, the 22-year-old held in the slayings of three members of a Mill Valley family, is a mystery man to his neighbors.

The Mill Valley house at 124 West Blithedale Avenue where Bedayan rented a room was the scene of many comings and goings, particularly on weekends, but the visitors were very quiet, residents of 130 West Blithedale, next door, told reporters today.

The neighbors, L. Knowles Cooke, a retired teacher, and his sister, Mrs. William Rambosek, said they "never exchanged a word" with Bedayan because he "always looked the other way" when he emerged from the house. That usually was only in midafternoon, when he would drive away not to return until late at night, they said.

The two said they had speculated that Bedayan was a musician because he sometimes saw him sitting in a window, playing a guitar and writing. They said they also called him "the entrepreneur" because he seemed to host large weekend gatherings in the house. Two young women were also seen there much of the time, Cooke said.

Bedayan's residence is a rustic frame hillside house surrounded by redwood trees. Its front yard was littered today with delivered but unread newspapers. Potted plants grow on the sills of almost every window.

Another neighbor, a young matron, could not even identify Bedayan from his description — but said she had seen a young man with shoulder-length hair cooking in the kitchen on many occasions. (Bedayan had short hair when arrested.)

Cooke and his sister are friends of Bedayan's landlord, Irving Rosenstein, an attorney now living in Los Angeles. Bedayan is said to have resided in the home since September 1971.

Bedayan worked for a brief time recently in the Red Cart Market in Mill Valley, but was discharged for reportedly being too slow at his duties of bag boy and stock clerk. "It seemed as if his mind were somewhere else," said Wilson Lee, the market manager. Bedayan also reportedly had worked recently as a lifeguard.

Bedayan's mother, Marcea, who also lives in Mill Valley, refused to discuss her son's arrest. She said he was represented by Frank Cox of the Marin County Public Defender's office, who had told her not to comment.

Mrs. Bedayan, a nurse with the Mill Valley School District, has been active as a member of the Indian Valley Golf Club, and is captain of its businesswomen's golf association.

Another Order At Reservation

WOUNDED KNEE, S.D. (UPI) — Bureau of Indian Affairs police have ordered all National Council of Churches representatives off the Pine Ridge Indian reservation for aiding and abetting militant Indians entrenched at Wounded Knee.

Armed with a blanket summons issued by the Oglala Sioux Tribal Council, BIA police yesterday ordered about 20 NCC representatives to leave. The NCC volunteers, however, ignored a threat they would be jailed and said they were staying.

BIA police exerted the power of the summons—which gives them authority to throw out nonresident "undesirables" — Friday night when a group of about 70 Indians and whites seized a community hall in the nearby village of Porcupine.

Federal officers quickly ousted the group, which apparently was attempting to penetrate the cordon of marshals encircling Wounded Knee. There was no reports of violence.

But after most of the group was taken into custody for questioning, BIA police ejected the nonresidents from the reservation as "undesirables."

No negotiations to end the occupation of Wounded Knee were held Friday because Assistant Attorney General Harlington Wood was delayed in his return from Washington, where he was conferring with Justice and Interior Department officials.

Wood returned to Wounded Knee Friday night and negotiations were expected to be held today. Observers felt Wood had returned with a government offer to end the American Indian Movement (AIM) occupation of the last 18 days.

Dick Wilson, the Oglala Sioux Tribal chairman who has been an outspoken critic of the AIM takeover, said the council declared a state of emergency and authorized the tribal court to issue the blanket summons. When informed NCC representatives planned to stay, he said, "If they do that, they will sit in our jail."

However, there was no immediate move to oust the NCC representatives, who have been serving as mediators between the government and the militants and carrying food and other supplies through government lines to the AIM members.

About 10 BIA officers, headed by Sheriff Fred Two Bulls, swooped down on the Episcopal Church in Pine Ridge Friday where about a dozen of the NCC members were staying, and issued the summons to leave.

The churchmen said they could not be thrown out of the church because it belongs to the Episcopal Church of South Dakota, and said their attorneys had advised them to stay.

JOINS FATHER — An armed Indian militant, who claims to have arrived Thursday in Wounded Knee, S.D., to join his father, stands guard next to a snowman in front of the Sacred Heart Church. He said he is from Arcata in Northern California and identified himself as Allen Looking Door.

A Select Few Will See Watergate File

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congressional sources say the Nixon administration has put a stop to acting FBI Director L. Patrick Gray's offer to let all senators read interviews, memoes and field reports in the Watergate file.

Instead, only a few select senators and two lawyers hired by the special Senate committee investigating the Watergate case will be allowed to view "raw" FBI files.

A senator on the committee, who had planned to spend next weekend pouring over the voluminous file, said he won't be able to.

The restrictions on access to the files were worked out by committee chairman Sam J. Ervin, D-N.C., and Sen. Howard H. Baker, R-Tenn., ranking GOP member of the committee, at a meeting yesterday with Attorney General Richard Kleindienst.

Ervin and Baker said the new arrangement would prevent improper dissemination of raw FBI data while giving the committee full benefit of results of FBI investigations into the breaking in at Democratic national headquarters last June.

But the Justice Department apparently intends that most members of the Judiciary Committee and other senators will be denied access to the files that already have been examined by a handful of senators.

It is expected that Judiciary Chairman James O. Eastland, D-Miss., and ranking Republican Sen. Roman L. Hruska, R-Neb., will be allowed to look over the documents. However, staff aides will not be permitted to view the files.

Kleindienst reportedly did agree to permit Samuel Dash, chief counsel, and Fred Thompson, minority counsel, to personally inspect the files to aid the Ervin committee in its probe expected to start next month.

The rescinding of Gray's offer is not likely to help the embattled former submarine commander in winning endorsement from the Judiciary Committee to be permanent FBI director.

He was at his home in Stonington, Conn., Friday and unavailable for comment on the new arrangements.

He had made what he called an "unprecedential" offer to give every senator access to the files to prove the FBI's Watergae investigation was complete and free from White House interference.

The limiting of Gray's offer came one day after President Nixon told a news conference he was opposed to giving FBI "raw files" to large numbers of people in Congress because they would leak out and hurt innocent people. Nixon said he understood Gray's offer but that it "should not be a precedent for the future."

The arrangement worked out was similar to one which Nixon, at his news conference, said was used by the late FBI director J. Edgar Hoover.

Marcos On Scene

MANILA (UPI) — President Ferdinand E. Marcos today flew to the troubled Southern Philippines, where foreign troops were reported to have linked up with Maoist-led Moselm secessionists. Marcos declared the insurgency has been "practically crushed."

A brief government announcement said Marcos made a short flying trip to the Mindanao-Sulo region, 500 miles south of Manila. He was scheduled to return tonight to meet with top military officials.

The announcement said the president visited areas where "government forces had to turn back Maoist-led attacks on government outposts during the past few days."

Cuba, U.S. Clash

PANAMA CITY (UPI) — Cuba and the United States clashed Friday at the first U.N. Security Council session held in Latin America, with the Cuban ambassador quoting from the Bible to support charges the United States uses the Canal Zone as a center for hemispheric subversion.

After the polemics, the council adjourned for the weekend and took a break on a tropical island.

Undergoing Tests

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Tricia Nixon Cox, the President's elder daughter, is undergoing diagnostic tests at Georgetown University Hospital this weekend for an undisclosed ailment.

Mrs. Cox, 27, was admitted to the hospital yesterday afternoon for a stay of two or three days while she is "undergoing a diagnostic procedure," the White House said.

She was accompanied to the hospital by Dr. Walter Tkash, the White House physician. Tkash, while not revealing her illness, told aides "it isn't serious."

Bomb Mars Holiday

DUBLIN (UPI) — A bomb shattered the town hall of the small western Ireland town of Claremorris today a few hours before townfolk staged their annual St. Patrick's Day march.

The explosion, which police said injured no one, underscored the tight police security surrounding St. Patrick's Day celebrations in the Irish capital for celebrants and visitors. All parking was banned near the route of a giant industrial pageant that wound through the city center watched by thousands of Dubliners and visitors.

Land Mine Death

BELFAST (UPI) — A land mine blast killed a British army mail driver and injured his escort guard today in the latest of a series of bombings and shootings in advnce of Britain's White Paper next week on Northern Ireland's future.

British officers said several thousand soldiers were on standby in Britain and West Germany to reinforce the 17,500 troops already in the province in case the violence worsened.

The soldier's death raised the fatality toll to 751 in three and one half years of fighting among Protestants, Roman Catholics and security forces.

Acapulco Vacation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger flew to Acapulco, Mexico, last night for a vacation.

He planned to be gone 10 days, with perhaps a stopover in Palm Springs, Calif., to visit actor Kirk Douglas and his wife. When he returns, one of his first tasks will be to put final touches on President Nixon's State of the World message to Congress.

WITH TAX LID PETITIONS

Reagan Ready To Walk Streets

SACRAMENTO (AP) Gov. Ronald Reagan, frustrated by a Democratic-controlled Legislature, is literally taking the initiative to clamp a lid on government spending.

Any California voter can launch a 520,000-signature initiative petition drive to change the California Constitution.

And that is what citizen-Reagan intends to do with his new plan to put a long-range freeze on the amount of tax dollars the state can take from its wage-earning residents.

But unlike the average citizen, the Republican chief executive also has the authority to call a special statewide election to give the voters a chance to approve his plan — an election which the secretary of state's office says could cost $10 million.

Reagan's office said it would be the first time in history that a California governor took to the streets himself with an initiative petition campaign. It would be the first time since the 1930s there had been such a special statewide election.

The governor has yet to submit the proposed constitutional amendment to the legislature, where it could go on the ballot by a two-thirds vote of each house. But he already considers the unique plan doomed in the Capitol so he is gearing up for a statewide petition campaign expected to get under way early in April.

The state now collects about nine cents in taxes on every dollar earned by Californians. Reagan's plan is to gradually squeeze the tax structure so that can be cut to about seven cents by 1990.

This would save the taxpayers $118 billion over a 15-year period and still give state government plenty of grow with the economy, Reagan said.

Democratic leaders in the legislature have branded the program unworkable and say it is unwise to hamstring future governors and legislatures by freezing such a specific tax structure into the Constitution.

Reagan told them in a special message this past week that all he was asking was to give the voters a chance to consider the program at the ballot box.

"To deny them that opportunity would make a mockery of the very process which the people have authorized for major constitutional issues," he said.

If the Legislature doesn't act quickly to place the issue on the ballot, Reagan said, "I will have no choice but to meet my commitment to the people of California and lead a petition drive to place the issue on the ballot by initiative at a special statewide election in November."

The state Constitution gives him a 110-day period to collect the 520,000 needed signatures. They would have to be turned in and certified by late July for an election to be held in early November.

There is no statewide election in November but there are some local elections and Reagan said it would save money to consolidate them with his ballot plan at that time.

A spokesman for the secretary of state's office estimated it still would cost about $10 million to conduct the balloting.

Reagan said Tuesday that a major reason he decided not to run for the U.S. Senate in 1974 was to give him time to work for enactment of his revolutionary tax lid plan. He had already said he would not run for a third four-year term as governor.

He said, "I prefer to be governor for the next two years, not a candidate."

Reagan has said the plan can be a model for the nation in cutting the size of government and he intends to become a national evangelist against the "economic and political myths" that business can be burdened with more taxes.

No matter what form the tax is, he said, the people wind up paying it.

There were nine initiatives on the ballot last fall and the most costly of all was the $2 million campaign by the California State Employes Association to take away the governor's veto over salary increases. It failed.

Reagan has not estimated what his own campaign to collect the 520,000 signatures would cost. He said last year's successful initiative drive to restore capital punishment in California, actively supported by Reagan, cost virtually nothing.

Most special interest groups trying to land an issue on the ballot hire professional signature-gathering firms at a cost of up to $100,000 to qualify a proposed constitutional amendment.

Once it's on the ballot, Reagan likely would do most of the campaigning on its behalf.

Democratic leaders of the state Assembly already have said they might try to pass their own counter proposal that would go on the ballot in direct opposition to Reagan's.

It takes a simple majority of those voting in the election to approve a constitutional amendment. In the case of competing proposals, the one with the highest number of votes would prevail.

Conviction By Jury In Pot Trial

A Marin Superior Court jury has convicted two Novato residents of drug violations that came to light after one allegedly threw a five-gallon bag of water containing goldfish at two Novato police officers.

After two hours' deliberation Thursday, the jury in the court of Judge Charles Read Best found Donald Paul Seaman, 37, guilty on felony counts of possessing marijuana, having it for sale and having restricted drugs and a misdemeanor battery count.

Codefendant Judith Elaine Neil, 28, was convicted of having marijuana.

Judge Best set sentencing for May 3, then ordered Seaman to jail in the meantime.

The two were arrested last May 28 by two policeman, who said Seaman hurled the bag of water at them on the carnival grounds of the Western Country Fair.

Police said Seaman had pot in his pockets and at his home and was carrying a list of what appeared to be customers in pot sales.

Changes In Funerals Reflect New Attitudes

the time of her husband's funeral — but since has felt ignored and isolated by the same persons, who failed to maintain contact.

Few social organizations offer ongoing help to such persons; churches do so in varying degrees. Social workers say persons with few ties before a death in the family are unlikely to make new contacts later without outside encouragement.

The crumbling of the conventions of death, nevertheless can satisfy some survivors.

Lewis W. (Skip) Stewart, San Anselmo city councilman, contrasted the death of his father six years ago and his mother this year.

Alice Stewart died in rural Yuba City, but she expressed "the change of thought — that the ceremonial funeral is on the way out," Stewart said, "She told us, 'I don't want any fuss, just a simple cremation'.

"It's so absurd to spend $2,500 for a conventional service and go through all the stress... and listen to a stranger" eulogize as was done for his father, the son said. Even so, for his mother, the coffin, funeral director's fees and a long trip to and from the crematory 50 miles away cost more than $400.

Stewart recalled with displeasure, his visit to the casket room to choose the coffin, and the funeral director gesturing at the variously priced coffins and murmuring "there's one here for every station in life."

Stewart and his two sisters replaced the traditional funeral with an informal "memorial service fitting her personality," he said.

It was in the family home, attended by about 175 persons including the mother's friends and kinfolk and all generations of the Stewart clan and their friends.

The grandchildren and their friends were invited to sing and play musical instruments at the service.

"We wondered if the older ones would approve, but the kids brought it off so beautifully... everybody was crying, yet it was happy, done with real feeling," Stewart recalled. "I managed a few words; others told things they knew about her."

A potluck picnic followed the service; "there was chicken and ham and some bottles..." and the survivors who "never really knew mother's friends before" became better acquainted with them.

"The whole thing left everybody with such a good feeling we've been talking about it every since," Stewart concluded.

Storm Hits Six States In South

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

A sudden winter storm dumped torrential rains and tornadoes across six southern states Friday, killing three persons, driving hundreds from their homes and leaving entire towns awash.

Tennessee was hardest hit by the storm,with flooding from the Mississippi River in the west to the Tennessee River in the east. But eight tornadoes touched down in Georgia towns and there was flooding and wind damage in Mississippi, Alabama, North Carolina and Virginia.

A 15-year-old Chattanooga boy, Erick Neumann, fell into a trainage ditch and drowned Friday. Two motorists also were killed in Tennessee.

National Guard helicopters droned through the night rescuing dozens of families stranded in Chattanooga when the Tennessee River thundered over its banks.

A Grundy County family, including nine children, was stranded on the roof of its home for hours before a Corps of Engineers amphibious vehicle could reach the house.

Torrential rains and tornadoes struck six Southern states Friday, spilling the mighty Mississippi and Tennessee rivers and several smaller streams over their banks. Two persons were drowned, hundreds were left homeless and entire towns were awash.

Tennessee was hardest hit by the sudden late winter storm, with flooding from the Mississippi River in the west to the Tennessee River in the east. But eight tornadoes touched down in Georgia towns and there was flooding and wind damage in Mississippi, Alabama, North Carolina and Virginia.

National Guard helicopters droned through the night rescuing dozens of families stranded in Chattanooga when the Tennessee River thundered over its banks.

Hundreds were rescued in Tennessee, which reported flooding all across the state, and in Mississippi.

"I've never seen water like this in my life," said Travis Clark, a Civil Defense worker at Greenwood, Miss. "You have to get in an airplane and fly over the area to really get the picture of the situation."

Earthquake Recorded In Philippines

MANILA (UPI) — A major earthquake, one of the strongest in three years, rocked the main island of Luzon and parts of the central Philippines today, causing some injuries and damage to tall buildings.

Red Cross and hospital officials said at least three persons were injured, including a 75-year-old woman who was hit by a flying galvanized iron sheet on her right arm and a man who leaped from the second story of an apartment.

The quake was felt in varying intensities ranging from three to six on the nine-degree Rossi-Forel scale on Luzon and in northern portions of the central Philippines.

The government geophysical division said the earthquake registered six in Manila, the strongest since an April 7, 1970, tremor that killed at least five persons and injured more than 60 persons. The 1970 quake reached an intensity of seven in some areas of Manila.

Epicenter of the quake was placed at 145 miles eastsoutheast of nearby Quezon City, the country's capital, in the waters between Luzon and Romblon island.

The quake was followed by two feeble aftershocks. Tall buildings swayed and plaster and marble tiles from the walls and ceilings on the ground floor of the Philamlife Insurance building in Manila's tourist district crashed down.

The shots and the fire awakened several neighbors and one spoke briefly to a man with a shotgun seen coming down the steps from the Schallock home.

Police wuld not say if the neighbor, Robert C. Cook, had identified Bedayan as the fleeing man.

Man Is Found Dead

Arthur L. Menzies, 57, assistant director of plants at Strybing Arboretum in San Francisco, was found dead of an apparently self-inflicted gunshot wound at his Stinson Beach home last night, according to the Marin County Coroner's Office.

Menzies of 110 Laurel Avenue had been depressed for some time and had been treated by a doctor earlier in the evening for flu symptoms, the coroner's office said. He was in the bedroom when the shooting occurred while his wife, Barbara, was in the kitchen cooking dinner. A stepson and stepdaughter, Greg and Kathy Sherfey, were also at home. He left no note.

The coroner's office said he had suffered a .38-caliber gunshot wound in the head.

anniversary of the overthrow of Sihanouk by Lon Nol.

Undersecretary of State Thong Lim Huong said at least 20 soldiers and their wives and children had been killed in the bombing and another 35 seriously injured in a fire that raged across the palace grounds, fueled by exploding ammunition. Witnesses said they feared the death toll could rise due to the seriousness of the injuries.

Lon Nol said So Potra sneaked into the military base at Phnom Penh's Pochentong Airport wearing a pilot's uniform and hijacked an American-built T28 fighter.

So Potra dropped two bombs in the compound of the Chamcar Mon presidential palace, scoring a direct hit on the military barracks adjacent to Lon Nol's residence.

"Thank the gods this attack did not obtain the results the enemies expected," Lon Nol said, "This was a clear attempt to kill me personally."

So Potra circled the capital for nearly an hour, then flew north and dropped a third bomb into the Tonle Sap river. His plane disappeared into the overcast sky.

March Air Force Base in California at 3:30 p.m. EST.

The only civilian POW among the departures, Bobby Joe Keesee, 39, astonished a crowd of about 200 when he stepped off an ambulance bus, walked directly to a U.S. flag held by a color guard, gathered the bottom part of it in his two hands and kissed it emotionally.

Keesee then pumped the hand of Gen. William S. Moore Jr., commander of the 13th Air Force, wheeled and ran to the crowd, where three teen-age girls presented him with a bouquet of gladiolas. As he ran back to the plane, Keesee pulled a white handkerchief from his pocket and dabbed at his eyes.

Keesee's capture and his unexplained presence in a North Vietnamese prison has mystified State Department officials. He is alleged to have been captured by the North Vietnamese in 1970 after he supposedly hijacked a light plane from Thailand. There never has been an official explanation of the incident.

All but one of the 60 former POWs plunged into the cheering crowd, which piled them high with leis, gifts, hugs and kisses. The exception was Navy Lt. Cmdr. John S. McCain III, who languished in a North Vietnamese prison for nearly six years while his father — Adm. John S. McCain Jr., now retired — conducted Vietnam operations as commander-in-chief of the Pacific forces.

The younger McCain, injured in the right leg, limped slowly aboard his plane, choosing to forego the crush of the exuberant crowd.

The senior officer in each of the three groups made brief planeside remarks to the crowd.

"You have welcomed us back to fantasyland in a manner we will never forget," said Air Force Col. James E. Bean, 49, of Arlington, Va. "We salute you and love you."

Navy Capt. Charles R. Gillespie Jr., 44, Miramar, Calif., told the crowd: "I assure you that we will always remember the love, the concern, the interest and the friendship that you have given us. Goodbye, God bless all of you wonderful, loveable people."

Old Problem Of Sewer Lines Crops Up Again

A "10-year-old problem and headache" — the question of sewer lines in Marin City — has returned to haunt the Sausalito-Marin City Sanitary District.

Directors Thursday held a special meeting to clear up questions surrounding the lines, which were installed 10 years ago for housing that never was built.

In the meantime, according to district Secretary Edwin S. Long, slides and cave-ins may have rendered the lines useless.

To further complicate matters, the lines were misplaced and are not in the proper easement areas where they belong.

Directors asked the Marin County Redevelopment Agency to locate the lines, realign the easements to match them and then check to see if the lines are useable.

Only then can the district accept them from maintenance, said Long. "This has been a 10-year-old problem and headache," he said.

COUNTERATTACK ON SLIDE — A large crane scoops away part of the ooze sliding toward Bridgeway in Sausalito. Two business firms fronting on the thoroughfare were closed yesterday by renewed activity of the weeks-old side. About 200 cubic yards of mud began slipping into the space behind a temporary bulkhead.

Two Businesses On Sausalito's Bridgeway Shut Again By Slide

Sausalito's Bridgeway landslide — temporarily repaired by an earthmoving project three weeks ago — slid again yesterday, forcing two businesses to close a second time.

H. Salt Esq., a fish and chips shop at 813 Bridgeway, and Les Crepes Voila, 817 Bridgeway, weer closed about 11:30 a.m. when about 200 cubic yards of gooey mud began moving slowly toward a temporary bulkhead set up when the hill first started sliding the last week in January.

Fred C. Grange, owner of Grange Debris Box Co. in San Rafael and contractor for the slide repair, said he hopes to relieve pressure on the unstable soil by digging out the latest slide and that the restaurants could reopen this weekend.

A crane moved in yesterday and began digging mud from behind the bulkhead.

Norman Gurin, a Novato soils engineer, blamed the slide on "too much ground water that has to come out somewhere."

"As long as it keeps raining, there's nothing we can do," he said. "We're just trying to minimize the damage and the danger to the public."

The entire hillside above Bridgeway for blocks in both directions is unstable and could come down at any time, he said.

The Casa Madrona Hotel and a residence on Bulkley Avenue, both above the slide area, "appear to be on good ground" and are not endangered by the latest earth movement said Gurin.

Brief Outage In Mill Valley

Portions of Mill Valley experienced an electrical brown-out that caused flickering lights and a brief outage Thursday from about 7 to 8:45 p.m., according to the Pacific Gas & Electric Co.

Robert H. Williams, district electrical supervisor, said that a connection between two sets of lines burned out so that only half the regular voltage was available in affected areas.

He said such partial power failures were not unusual and were not caused by a heavy demand for power that the system could not supply.

THE PORT INTRODUCES

Howard Young, of Summerland Company, is not merely a plant merchant. He sees himself as a caretaker of living creatures. "My partner, Steve Marek, turned me onto plants. He kept taking sick plants home to nurse them. He looked at me and said, 'Could you sell your cat?' Now, once I've taken one home and cared for it, told it that it's mine and that it can live with all the other plants, I can't bring it back to the store and sell it. I have over 300 plants at home.

Some people look at plants as decoration. Buy an end table, buy a plant, it's all the same. But plants respond if you care about them. Of course, they have to be watered and fed, but it matters a great deal if you care about them."

Summerland Plant Co. offers live plants, advice on their care, and remedial treatment as well. "We don't let anybody take a plant home until we tell them just what it needs and write down instructions for its care. And if someone has a sick plant, I tell them to bring it in so I can have a look at it."

"Once we almost wouldn't let someone take a plant home. The lady was a vegetarian, and refused to give the plant fish fertilizer, because she didn't believe in eating fish."

About Howard's partner, Steve Marek: "I think Steve was a Spathiphylum in his last life. He can walk through the woods and not step on a weed. He's not watching for it – it just doesn't happen, he's so conscious of plant life." . . .

MUSIC REVIEW

Waring Puts 56 Years Of Entertainment On The Line

By VERA M. OLMSTED

All of those people streaming into the Marin Veterans Memorial Building last night were seeking entertainment, and they got it with a capital E. Fred Waring and the Pennsylvanians put on a fast-paced, though overly long show, using techniques and routines garnered from 56 years of show business.

The predominantly 'over-40' crowd probably grew up listening to Waring's radio broadcasts, and gave an enthusiastic response everytime Waring called out, "Are you having a good time?"

Most of Waring's musicians are in their 20s, and they are a lively and attractive group of people. Waring gives each singer at least one big solo, and keeps everyone moving in an almost frenetic kaleidoscope of changing costumes, patterns and songs.

The show opened with Waring jauntily attired in a yellow blazer and the rest of the group in outfits from the 1920s. The music in this part of the program included barbershop quarter arrangements, college fight songs and some jazz and blues.

After a costume change, the group reassembled on stage to sing and dance a more recent group of songs, accompanied by a loud rock-type background, strobe lights and including a novelty number using lighted tambourines.

The last part of the program was devoted to songs Waring believes will endure forever. Includes in this category were popular hits like the theme from "Love Songs," and a little theme and variations by Mozart, unforunately spoiled by Waring's attempt to turn it into a comedy routine.

Four "Hallelujah" choruses were sung next, the most successful of which was the one by Randall Thompson. It was a relief to hear the pure sound of the a cappella choir after the chorus-band arrangements of the previous numbers.

After a speeded-up and modernized version of the "Hallelujah" Chorus from the "Messiah" (which Waring believed was controversial enough to warrant an explanation), the next song seemed completely out of place — a patriotic marching song about litter in America.

The audience was invited to join in the last number, "Battle Hymn of the Republic," and did so lustily, jumping to its feet at the close of the program to give Waring and his group an enthusiastic ovation.

Antibusing Leader Claims Law Ignored

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Assemblyman Floyd L. Wakefield, sponsor of last November's anti-busing ballot proposition, charges the new law is being "ignored."

In an "open letter" to state schools' chief Wilson Riles and education officials throughout the state, the South Gate Republican Friday cited a Feb. 23 Sacramento Superior Court decision upholding the initiative as constitutional.

"If you are not familiar with that decision," Wakefield told the educators, "I would suggest that you take a few minutes and read what Judge (John G.) Babich says and why!"

In his ruling, the judge said "it is not the function of the courts to determine whether the people's action in (approving) Prop. 21 was wise or foolish. Our only function is to determine whether it is constitutional. The court finds that it is."

Wakefield charged that many officials "have ignored this law adopting a "wait and see" attitude while an appeal of the Feb. 23 decision is prepared and argued. He named no one specifically.

"This is a letter to advise you that I expect you to obey the law as mandated," Wakefield wrote. "We will expect each of you who continues to violate the law to be responsible for all funds which have been misappropriated.

"We, the people, intend to take court action on any violation of this new Education Code."

The proposition reads: "No public school student shall, because of his race, creed or color, be assigned to or be required to attend a particular school."

Riles was not available for comment on the letter, but a spokesman said that neither Prop. 21 nor the Sacramento court decision "directly involve the Department of Education, the State of California or the superintendent of public instruction.

"It's up to the districts," he said, adding, "Neither the superintendent or the department has advised any district requesting guidance to circumvent Prop. 21."

Dutton Hits Selection Of Regents

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A University of California regents says appointments to the prestigious body are politically inspired and "nobody gets on this board out of clearly public service motives."

Regent Fred Dutton made his comments yesterday during a four-hour discussion on proposals for the university drafted by a joint legislative committee.

Dutton said appointments "have been almost totally politically inspired under both the Democrats and Republicans."

"It's the big political and financial backers who get on this board."

Under the legislative recommendations, the regents would have shorter terms and the governor would no longer have sole power in appointments.

Several regents defended the current method of selection.

Regent Edward W. Carter said the present 16-year terms provided "the best insulation from politics."

The legislative plan also calls for bringing the state's colleges and universities into line with the ethnic, sexual and economic makeup of the state by 1980.

This proposal met with opposition from the board who said in a majority report: "It is questionable whether or not all special purpose institutions can or should be microcosms of the general society."

"Many other aspects of society, and in particular the schooling of students from kindergarten through the 12th grade, will have to be changed and improved if the campuses are to come near to meeting the prescribed goals by 1980."

The chairman of the legislative committee, Assemblyman John Vasconcellos, D-San Jose, countered that the legislature's aim is to "meet the times and the needs of the future."

The Regents also opposed loosening admission requirements to take in more underpriviled students who lack qualifying grades.

In other matters, the regents named Donald L. Reidhaar, 39, to succeed Thomas J. Cunningham as general counsel of the university, effective July 1. Reidhaar, a member of Cunningham's staff, will take over the post when Cunningham retires.

Petaluma Street Widening Eyed

Plans to widen Washington Street to ease traffic congestion will be reviewed at the Petaluma City Council meeting Monday at 7:30 p.m. at city hall.

Plans call for reducing the width of sidewalks and banning parking on Washington from Kentucky to Howard Streets.

The council also will hold a public hearing on plans by Lyle D. Hood to build two single-family homes and two triplexes on the north side of Grant Avenue. A petition of opposition signed by 49 neighbors will be presented.

Neighbors are expected to complain that the additional units will casue traffic problems and damage the rural atmosphere.

Two Coffees Set For Roberta Michaels

Civilian POW Tells Of Brutality

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Describing a two-year barefoot forced march, the deaths of two friends, hunger, illness and great suffering, a U.S. civilian has become the first returning prisoner of war to level detailed charges of brutality against the North Vietnamese.

Michael Benge, 37, of Hepner, Ore., told newsmen yesterday of five years of captivity, during which he said he was made to walk some 600 miles, from South Vietnam into Laos and Cambodia and up the Ho Chi Minh Trail into North Vietnam.

He told of the deaths of two other American civilians from lack of medical aid, of seeing communist captors drive a group of women and children into a revine and kill them with flame throwers, and of his own 27 months in an airless, nine-by- nine-foot concrete cell near Hanoi.

During the two years of walking, he said, he suffered from "malnutrition, scabies all over my body" and the temporary loss of all his hair. He said he was delerious part of the time and became temporarily blind.

Benge, described by friends as a "feisty" ex-Marine with "plenty of guts," was an area advisor for the U.S. Agency for International Development (AID) in South Vietnam. He said he was captured Jan. 31, 1968, during the Communist Tet offensive while trying to round up civilian personnel in the Central Highlands.

He said his captors pretended to be part of local guerilla forces, but that he speaks Vietnamese as well as two Montangnard dialects and identified them as 13 North Vietnamese regulars. Much later on the journey, he said, his captors made no attempt to hide their identities.

About 5-foot-9 and weighing about 140 pounds, Benge choked up with emotion during a State Dpeartment news conference as he told of the deaths of two other captives—Betty Olsen, a nurse for the Christian Missionary Alliance, and Henry Flood, a linguistics scholar from California.

He said Miss Olsen died at the Cambodian border Sept. 26, 1968, after suffering for five days from amoebic dysentery. He said a North Vietnamese commander, despite his pleas, refused to give her medication, which he said was easily available at a nearby rest camp.

He said Flood died in July of 1968 of "debilitation, malnutrition and pneumonia."

"He died," Benge said with a sob. "We buried him."

He said he and Miss Olsen "begged them for three days to bring up medicines that they had" but the North Vietnamese refused to do so.

Bitterly he told of seeing a number of women and children from three villages which the North Vietnamese had overrun driven into a ravine, where he said flame throwers "burned them to a crisp."

He said he was held in chains during the early part of his confinement and was frequently interrogated. Asked whether he was coerced to give information, he said, "I was coerced. I prefer not to talk about it. I was coercrd quite stiffly."

In South Vietnam, he said a North Vietnamese doctor used a rusty razor blade and nail scissors to remove a bone growth from his left foot.

Benge, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Terrel Benge, live in Hepner, was released in Hanoi March 5. He joined the AID agency in 1965, after serving as a worker in the church sponsored International Volunteer Service.

Despite his story of hardship, he said he had "no animosity" toward the North Vietnamese people "although I don't agree with their system." He spoke in favor of amnesty for Americans who evaded military service, provided they were willing to put in two years service to the government. He felt President Nixon was right in ordering heavy bombing of North Vietnam last December.

"I was very elated when we received word of negotiations in October," Benge said. "The North Vietnamese made an attempt then to fatten us up and they put us on a heavy starch diet. When the negotiations broke down, the rations were cut."

Patrick Hit Again With Big Lawsuit

Another in the series of lawsuits by persons claiming they were injured in classes of William Penn Patrick's Leadership Dynamics Institute was filed yesterday in Marin Superior Court.

The suit asks for $4.2 million in damages equally split between Edward Lieberman and his wife, Sharon. Both attended classes March 16 to 19, 1971, at Rickey's Hyatt House in Palo Alto.

Each claims $100,000 for injuries said to have been suffered during beatings administered during the course and $2 million punitive and exemplary damages for what was descirbed as false promises.

The course, according to the suit, promised a new vision of life, higher earning potential, a changed life and the best experience of one's life, but failed to deliver.

The suit, filed by San Francisco attorney Robert B. Ingram, also asks for costs of the suit and costs incurred by the Liebermans to attend the course, including the $1,000 tuition.

Named were Patrick, Leadership Dynamics, Holiday Magic of San Rafael and 15 employees and teachers of the corporations.

Prisoner Exchange Talks Are Off Again

SAIGON (UPI) — A meeting of the four-party commission that arranges prisoner exchanges broke off today. The Communists provided no list of the remaining U.S. POWs, but a Viet Cong official indicated the release might come sooner than expected.

Lt. Gen. Tran Van Tra, a Viet Cong official, told his first formal news conference: "Phase four (of the U.S. POW release program) will be correctly carried out and we shall do our utmost to carry out...the return better than we did (previous phases). This is a gesture of our good will and we urge the other parties to do as much."

A special subcommittee of the Joint Military Commission (JMC) went into session today with U.S. officials anxious to receive the final list of 146 Americans still held by the Communists. But no such list list was turned over to U.S. officials.

The first release of 27 U.S. POWs by the Viet Cong Feb. 12 in South Vietnam was delayed 12 hours. The second release came March 5, six days late. And Friday's release of 32 Americans in Hanoi came four days behind the schedule outlined by White House aide Henry A. Kissinger when he explained the Vietnam ceasefire agreement in January.

Tra indicated today the final release of U.S. POWs would not be held up. Under terms of the Vietnam truce, there are only 11 more days before all prisoners of war are to be repatriated and all U.S. troops are to be out of Vietnam.

The United States Friday halted its troop withdrawal program until the Communists produce details of the final scheduled release of American POWs.

The Communists were accused today of infiltrating thousands of troops and "several hundred tanks" across the border into South Vietnam. Tra scoffed at the charges at his news conference.

Lt. Col. Le Trung Hien, chief spokesman for the Saigon command, said intelligence reports confirmed that the Communists had moved "scores of thousands of troops" into South Vietnam since the Jan. 28 cease-fire.

"When we see the infiltration by the enemy is not standable any more, then we will act," Hien said. He suggested that members of the peace-supervisory International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS) "open their eyes, open their ears and look."

Tra, at his first news conference since the cease-fire, declared today that charges by the alllies of infiltration "are groundless." He added that the Communists were "waiting for the settlement of the question of points of entry" for replacement of arms as called for under the Paris agreement.

Hien said the South Vietnamese government had not asked the United States for air power to counter the alleged infiltration of troops and tanks.

Woman Reports Attack Made

A 19-year-old San Rafael woman was raped at gunpoint about 10:30 p.m. yesterday as she was walking to her home on Woodland Avenue, police reported.

The woman was seized by a man who held a revolver to her neck and made her disrobe in a concrete plant at 665 Irwin Street.

The attacker was described asabout 22 years old, five feet 10 inches tall and weighing about 160 pounds, with shoulder-length brown hair.

Violations By Israeli Are Charged

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

The Lebanese military command said today Israel had committed eight violations of Lebanese airspace during the past week, but the government denied newspaper reports that Israeli troops were massing on the border.

Acting Prime Minister Albert Mokheiber said in Beirut: "Until this hour we have not received information which indicate that there is a massing of Israeli troops on the southern front." Mokheiber's statement was broadcast by Beirut Radio.

The Palestine News Agency (WAFA) and several Beirut newspapers said earlier there were Israeli troop movements, near the border and speculated that an attack on South Lebanon might be imminent.

The Palestine News Agency WAFA said Friday night "observation posts of the Palestinian revolution report that the Zionist enemy has started a military buildup along the entire length of the southern border."

At the same time, several Beirut newspapers said an Israeli attack was imminent. In Beirut, acting Interior Minister Jamil Kibbe met Palestinian guerrilla leader Yasser Arafat Friday night.

SEW SIMPLE

Today's Styles Not For Everyone

By EUNICE FARMER
(Distributed by Register and Tribune Syndicate)

Guess in some ways, I'm just a doctor who goes to a cocktail party and all the guests run up and tell him their problems and hope for a friendly answer.

This morning while I was waiting in line at the grocery store, a woman spoke to me and told me she was going to a very special party and asked me for suggestions as to what she should wear. I realized once again that this business of dressing with a "look of today" that isn't too ridiculous when your age and body don't measure up, is one of the major problems most women are confronted with.

Her first question was, "Should I wear a pant-dress?" My answer might have sounded a little frivolous, but I told her it depended on her hips and legs. If a woman has a beautiful body she would look good in a burlap bag. If not, we must work on modifications.

IF YOU CAN'T wear an extreme, skinny body dress, choose a pattern that has a fuller, more graceful pant leg that resembles a skirt when worn.

There are also variations at the waistline. Some have gathers at the waist, others are smooth over the hips and then continue to the wide leg. A soft fabric will make you look slimmer than a stiff one.

Her next question was, "Would you make a halter bodice?" I replied, "That depends on your top." What I'm trying to say is that we can all achieve a "look of today" with modification.

Exposing too much of your body would be a total disaster unless you have a youthful and firm figure. Remember, we women who sew have a great advantage when it comes to clothes. There are literally thousands of designs to choose from. Carefully analyze yourself before you make your choice.

The fashions that make the headlines are usually so extreme that they apply to only a few women. Good common sense and good taste should be a guide to your success story in dressing.

Mrs. Adrian M. Savage, Millers Falls, Mass., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her following suggestion:

"When you are working with the new tall spools of thread, I have found that a straw (the kind you get in an ice cream shop) works perfectly on your spindle. The straw acts as an extension and even the largest cones of thread stay in place. This idea also works if you want to use two colors at one time or double-thread for top stitching threaded through your sewing machine needle. The straw keeps your spools from tipping and wobbling about.

DEAR EUNICE,

I just finished taking a course in lingerie making and we learned how to make the narrow spaghetti straps for gowns. The instructor told us to cut the tricot on the cross-grain instead of the bias as you told us before. Who is right?

MRS. S. W.

DEAR MRS. S.W.,

Methods change with the kind of fabrics we are working with. Remember today, there are many choices of construction depending on the weight and kind of fabric.

Because the tricot is so lightweight and the knit has such "give," it is not necessary to cut your strips on the bias. In fact, it is better not to because with the cross-grain you get the most stretch possible. It turns much easier.

For making the popular spaghetti straps for your dresses this summer, continue to cut the strips on the bias. You will enjoy my easy-to-follow instructions called "Spaghetti Straps and Chinese Ball Buttons." You may receive your copy by sending 10 cents and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Eunice Farmer, in care of the Independent-Journal.

DEAR EUNICE,

I have selected a new pattern that is the shirtwaist style with buttons down the front. I love the style, but don't like to button and unbutton the buttons each time. The buttonholes seem to get larger and there is always a gap between buttons. Is there any way I can change the back of the collar so that I can apply a zipper to the back? There is already a center back seam on the dress, but the collar is cut on the fold.

MRS. B.B.

DEAR MRS. B.B.:

Thank you for your letter, it came just in time for me to try it myself. I selected a pattern with many small buttons down the front. It looks so much neater when the buttons are sewn on perfectly and permanently.

You can make this change on any pattern. If you don't have a seam at the center back of your dress, simply add one inch to the pattern when cutting. The center back marks will still be the same. You will also cut the collar, both top and under collar with a center back seam, by adding the adequate one inch for the seam allowance (actually you only need ⅝ inches but it's easier to cut it the same as the back of the dress).

Many shirt dresses have a shallow opening instead of opening to the waist. If you don't like squeezing into this small neckline, you may add a zipper to the back of this dress also. (Have courage, there isn't much you can't change in a pattern if you use good judgment and plan before cutting.)

GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

Just Remember At 14, There's More Than One Boy To Fancy

RAP:

I have two problems. Let's call them Boy A and Boy B.

I like "A" a lot, but after he asked me out once (we had a great time), he's never tried dating me again. People say he still likes me though.

Boy "B" hangs around all the time and tells people he's crazy about me. They think we're a couple, but we aren't. I like him a little, not as much as I like "A." But I don't want to break off entirely cuz I know he'll start liking a friend of mine who will just hurt him. She uses guys to make girls jealous but "B" doesn't realize this.

What should I do? I want "A," but I've got "B." "A" probably won't try to go with me as long as "B" is in the picture, and if I drop "B" this girl will treat him bad. — IN A SPOT AT 14

DEAR IN:

Get it around —especially to "B" that you and he aren't a couple, but you like his friendship.

If "A" still doesn't call — well, "C" must be out there somewhere. . .and "D". . .and "E". . .and "F". . .At 14, nothing is very permanent, (though I know you won't believe a word I say). — HELEN

IN A SPOT:

Two suggestions:

1. "B" is a big boy. He can take care of himself. If you hung on to every guy you vaguely like because another girl might hurt him, you'd be so busy "protecting" you'd have no time for hunting.

2. Don't force yourself on "A," but make sure he knows you're free to date.

HELEN AND SUE:

My boyfriend and I, both 21, had a trial live-in. I'm glad we did, because I found out there's no way we could ever be happily married, especially forever. He's a great guy — for some other girl. But no fun to live with!

My problem is —I can't get him to move out! He realizes we're through as lovers, but this is very cheap rent, and he can't find another place he can afford (he says). He thinks it's a great arrangement for him to take the other bedroom, keep on doing half his share of work and paying (almost) his half of the bills.

But that isn't the point. How will a new man react to this situation — and of course there will be another man in my life. It's inevitable.

Idon't want to be mean — I still consider Bo one of my best friends and I know he's almost broke, going to college on a shoestring; but what do I nicely do — TO GET RID OF THE NESTER WHO HAS NO JOB TGROTN:

I suppose you've already talked with Bo about going to the college job placement office or perhaps to the Welfare Department. If that didn't get the message across, you've got a pretty dense guy on your hands. . .or maybe one who knows an easy mark when he sees her. He can live on the cheap with other friends if he just looks around. Stop being a softy and tell him. — SUE

DEAR GIRLFRIEND:

If all else fails, invite your parents up. Naturally, Bo will have to leave for the duration.

So make sure he doesn't move in again.

ONE PRESIDENT'S PIERCE ARROW

Sausalito Details Development Plans

Restaurateur Sam Zakessian's plans for a multi-million dollar commercial and recreational development on the Sausalito waterfront have been derailed by the city planning commission.

Chairman Robert L. Nissen reported the commission, at a special meeting Thursday, voted 3-2 to deny a conditional use permit sought by Zakessian.

The development has been planned in a railroad yard motif, with a station house serving as a restaurant and several railroad cars on sidings used as shops.

Nissen said commissioners believed the proposed development "did not conform to the general plan and that most of the commercial uses would be visitor-oriented which should not be extended out of the downtown area."

Zakessian, whose proposal had been the subject of five meetings before Thursday's rejection, has the right to appeal the denial to the city council but Nisen said he did not know if Zakessian would do so.

The 20-acre project would have been located north of Zack's Restaurant, which Zakessian owns.

Plea Made To Burglary Try

A San Rafael man arrested Wednesday has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to a felony charge of attempted burglary.

San Anselmo police said they found Galarza hiding in a shed near the Seawood Photo Shop, 115 Tunstead Avenue. A window of the shop was smashed, police said.

Plea Made On Theft Of Auto

A 40-year-old San Rafael man has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to a felony auto theft charge.

Preliminary hearing for William Joseph Gibbons was set for Tuesday.

Gibbons was arrested Wednesday by San Rafael police, who answered a report that someone was breaking into cars on Glen Park Avenue about 4 a.m.

Police said they found Gibbons sitting in a late model Camaro and later found he had been driving a 1965 Buick that Judith A. Levy of 1210 Grand Avenue, San Rafael, had reported as stolen.

Shoreline Trustees Set Study Session On Classroom Plans

Shoreline Unified School District trustees have decided to hold a special meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at Tomales High School to review architectural plans for eight classrooms and a library at Tomales Elementary School.

Meeting Thursday night, board members accepted the resignation of Supt. Charles E. McCully, effective June 30.

McCully, the district's first superintendent, will become superintendent of the Albany City Unified School District.

The board also accepted the resignations of Michael Maloney, Tomales High School agricultural teacher, and David Kennen, fourth-fifth grade teacher at West Marin School, according to Asst. Supt. Kenneth L. Barnes.

The Tomales High School Booster Club notified the board it will help pay for a scoreboard for the football field, up to $1,000, Barnes said.

Joint Meeting Set In Novato

The Novato City Council will hold a joint meeting with the city's environmental quality committee at 7 p.m. Monday at the Novato Community House.

Councilmen also will continue review of the Novato general plan and decide whether to reconsider their decision to prezone the Woodland Co. property off Olive Avenue for a density of about 70 units on 66 acres.

Correct Dates For Conference

Ecological problems will be discussed during the Marin Countywide Environmental Conference to be held March 23 and 24 at San Domenico School in Sleepy Hollow, not March 24 and 25 as was incorrectly reported in yesterday's Independent-Journal.

The conference is free and general sessions are open to the public. Teachers are invited to bring students from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. both days.

Cleared On Burglary

A 22-year-old Lagunitas man has been cleared on an attempted burglary in Larkspur by a Marin Superior Court judge, who ruled not enough evidence existed to try the man.

Judge Gary W. Thomas dismissed the felony charge against Scott Doyle Weaver Thursday after hearing the prosecution evidence in a preliminary hearing.

Weaver was arrested in his car at Via Hidalgo and Bon Air Road shortly after a burglar alarm announced a burglary at a pharmacy on South Eliseo Drive.

Police said Weaver's clothing was cut and a powdery substance similar to that found on a rug in the store was found on the seat of Weaver's car.

CLOSING COSTS EXPLAINED

When you buy a home, the business of closing costs always comes up. What are these closing costs anyway?

Title Insurance for instance, to make certain your property is free of any encumbrances. Loan Fee, Termite Report, as well as pro-rated taxes, for the buyer's share of the 6-month tax period. Tax and insurance Impounds, Notary and Recording Fees.

Bothersome details maybe, but all very important to the protection of your property. And preferably arranged through the expertise of your Realtor. When you buy a home, have a professional handle your affairs. And if you're selling a home, place it on Multiple Listing. Buying or selling, talk it over with a Realtor — your Real Estate professional.

It was built in 1964 with the thought of serving a need of a growing family. The 3 bedrooms are big and the fourth room could well serve as a playroom, office or just another bedroom. From the all electric kitchen, you can keep an eye on the children. When the grandparents or friends come for dinner, wouldn't it be nice to use the formal dining room ?? Poison-Proofing Of Homes Urged

The Marin County Health Department today urged parents to "poison proof" their homes as part of national poison prevention week, Monday through Saturday.

Dr. Carolyn B. Albrecht, county health officer, suggested that parents double check to see that medicines, cleaning compounds, pesticides and other poisons are out of the reach of children.

"Another source of danger to children is often overlooked," she continued. "This is a woman's handbag, which may contain potent medications. The toddler loves to explore the contents of these bags."

Dr. Albrecht also suggested properly labeling medicines and household products and periodically disposing of old medicines by flushing them down a drain.

Brockbank Coffee Schedule Is Told

Elaine Brockbank, candidate for the Tamalpais High School District board, will be introduced at three coffees next week.

ALMANAC

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Today is Saturday, March 17, the 76th day of 1973 with 289 to follow.

The moon is approaching its full phase. The morning stars are Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Mercury. The evening star is Saturn. American singer Nat "King" Cole was born March 17, 1919.

On this day in history:

In 1889, a submarine developed by John Holland remained submerged off Staten Island, N.Y., for one hour and 45 minutes.

In 1912, Mrs. Luther Gulick of Lake Sebago, Maine formed a group of young women to be known as "The Campfire Girls."

In 1938, Generalissimo Franco ordered the bombing of Loyalist-held Barcelona in the Spanish Civil War.

In 1958, the Navey successfully launched Vanguard I, a 3½-pound satellite, into orbit around the earth.

A thought for the day: American publisher Horace Greeley said, "The illusion that times that were are better than those that are has probably pervaded all ages."

San Rafael air quality yesterday:

Oxidants, clean air.
Nitrogen dioxide, clean air.
Carbon monoxide, clean air.
Smoke particiles, light air pollution.

Other areas:

San Francisco, clean air.

A Protest Begins On Food Prices

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Consumers across the nation angered over rising food prices are boycotting, picketing, planning, protesting and telephoning others in efforts to force price roll backs, especially of meat.

Opening a week-long campaign for lower prices, Betty Furness, former consumer affairs adviser to the late President Johnson, asserted in New York yesterday, "It's high time for a boycott."

In Hellertown, Pa., 20 housewives who have been eating dog food for several weeks to dramatize their objections to the high cost of meat hold a demonstration in front of a supermarket today on how to sweeten up the canine cuisine.

And in Provo, Utah, four Brigham Young University students used a computer to come up with a 3,000-calorie, 53-cent-a-day diet that includes 38 graham crackers, 7 tablespoons of peanut butter, a quarter-ounce of liver and 3.5 cups of rice.

In Washington, Virginia Knauer, President Nixon's consumer adviser, said she didn't support boycotts because they were "unproductive" and urged consumers to buy selectively instead.

However, a spokesman for the National Association of Food Chains (NAFC) said in Washington that declines in beef purchases already have been reported by 17 supermarket chains. He said the dip apparently was caused by consumer reaction to the record prices and predicted that wholesale prices will begin to fall if the trend continues.

At the same time, the Agriculture Department announced that average wholesale beef prices rose to another record this week—of $70.85 for 600 to 700 pound choice grade steer carcasses at Chicago.

In Modesto, Calif., the Consumer Federation of California called Friday for a week-long boycott of meat. Attorney Frank Damrell Jr. of Modesto, president of the group, said the boycott would begin April 2, with members pamphleting at stores urging customers not to buy meat.

A similar effort was mounted in Citrus Heights, near Sacramento, by two housewives who started a telephone chain urging meatless Tuesdays and Thursdays.

In Council Bluffs, Iowa, two housewives mapped plans with a group of some 60 persons Friday night to picket six supermarkets today.

"The groceries have been nice to us," one of the women told the group. "Be nice to them. Keep a smile on your face. Don't block doorways and prevent customers from going in. But be determined and keep fighting."

'Top Secret' Challenge Hit By Judge

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Pentagon Papers taken by Daniel Ellsberg were all marked "top secret" and his lawyers had hoped to prove that they did not deserve that classification.

A ruling by U.S. District Court Judge Matt Bryne yesterday barred that line of inquiry and his action constituted one of the biggest setbacks to the defense since the trial began.

Byrne told Ellsberg's lawyers that they could not challenge the top secret classification, arguing that they were not really so sensitive to national security. Byrne said they could only be disputed on grounds they were improperly marked in the first place.

Ellsberg and codefendant Anthony J. Russo had intended to call witnesses to testify that by 1969 the classication was unwarranted.

The ruling by Byrne could cut down the length of the trial which got underway Jan. 2.

During the past week, the defense had called four members of the Kennedy administration who were involved in decision making on American Vietnam policy.

They were presidential assistants McGeorge Bundy, Arthur Schlesinger Jr. and Theodore Sorensen and Kennedy intimate John Kenneth Galbraith.

All four testified that release of the Pentagon Papers in 1969 could not have harmed the defense interests of the United States or helped a foreign power.

The testimony was intended to show that Ellsberg and Russo were not guilty of espionage.

Prosecutor David Nissen brushed off Sorenson Friday with only two questions on cross examination lasting less than 60 seconds. Nissen brought out that Sorensen had never served in the military or been in Vietnam. After that he said: "No further questions."

Project Along Hetherton Is Given Approval

A cooperative project between the state Department of Public Works and the City of San Rafael to plant trees and shrubs along Hetherton Street has been approved by the California Highway Commission.

A total of 80 trees, 700 shrubs and 31,000 ground cover plants will be planted along a two-tenths of a mile stretch between Second Street and Mission Avenue.

Cost of the project has been estimated at $42,500, of which the state will pay $24,500 and the city the balance, according to the highway commission.

Commissioner Vernon J. Cristina said the project will replace trees and shrubs destroyed during construction of the new southbound viaduct, and will complete a previous planting project delayed by city constructin in the area.

The city will be responsible for maintinaing the plants, he said.

A Marin City Market Looted

Thieves, who peeled off a section of wall to break in, took an undetermined amount of money and eight cartons of cigarettes from a market in Marin City Wednesday, the Marin County sheriff's office said yesterday.

The burglars tore off a section of tin siding with a crowbar, but carefully avoided setting off the alarm at Hayden's Market, 290 Drake Avenue, deputies said.

The breakin occurred between midnight and 5:30 a.m., according to deputies.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

Canned Foods Perfectly Safe When Taken Care Of Properly

We get many letters about canned foods. This is unusual because canning has been in existence so long, it is considered a traditional mode of preservation. Despite all of this, some people are worried about the quality and safety of these foods. Others wonder whether some of the "tin" rubs off or whether spoilage occurs when the contents are stored in an open can.

Obviously, improper handling and storage could result in deterioration and spoilage of canned foods. But this is unlikely because strict government (Food and Drug Administration) regulations govern the food industry.

CANS ARE sturdy; there is no need to worry about rust or dents so long as there is no opening. Beware if there is leakage, the ends bulge or swell, or if the contents have an unusual odor or appearance. Under these circumstances, do not taste it. Return the can to the market or health department.

An exception is the discoloration on the inside of the can that occurs occasionally. This is due to the release of sulfur from some foods during processing. Brown, blue, or black stains may appear, but the food is safe to eat.

Cans containing fruit juices may also have an "etched" pattern which is harmless.

Unopened canned goods should be stored in a moderately cool dry place. Avoid freezing and storage near steam pipes, radiators, and stoves. The FDA recommends a regular turnover of canned foods once a year.

FREEZING CHANGES the texture of some edibles and the can may expand until its seams burst. The contents now have been exposed to air and will spoil.

Once opened, the unused portion can be kept in the can only when refrigerated. In other words, it must be treated just as any other perishable. If the item is to be refrigerated for a long time, cover the can with a plastic wrap or pour the contents into a glass jar. When acidic foods (citric) are stored in an open can for some time a little iron may be absorbed from the can. A metallic taste may be present, but it is not harmful.

Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.

PINNING EARS

R. M. writes: Is age 14 too young to have the ears pinned back? My daughter's ears stick out and she is tired of wearing her hair one way. She is willing to have the operation done.

REPLY

Fourteen is not too young, but get a firsthand opinion from a plastic surgeon. Tell him what you mean, because where I come from, having "the ears pinned back" has a different connotation. The popularity of this operation wanes with hair styles and the demand increases when short hair is in vogue.

BALD WOMEN

A reader writes: What statistics do you have on baldheaded women in the United States?

REPLY

None. Baldness resembling that in men is becoming more common in women and many women lose so much hair they need a wig.

TOO MUCH SALT

J. M. writes: My parents keep telling me that if I salt my food too much. I'll get heart trouble. Does salt contribute to this ailment?

REPLY

Salt may raise the blood pressure of a person with hypertension, but it won't affect a normal blood pressure. Salt does not cause heart attacks. It must, however, be restricted if dropsy is present. Perhaps your parents are trying to discourage you from developing a taste for heavily-salted food because of its relationship to hypertension.

WEEKLY BATH

H. Y. writes: How often should a fairly inactive 17-year-old boy bathe? Is a complete bath every Saturday night enough?

REPLY

Bathe as often as necessary — twice a week as a minimum. It should be done more often when the skin is oily, and daily when you get dirty or perspiration is profuse. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on body odor.

MOOD ELEVATORS

A reader writes: Is it harmful for a physically healthy person to take a mood-lifting drug?

REPLY

Probably not, provided he limits the number to one daily. This question ought to be discussed with a physician who can tell you whether this type of pill is habit forming and what to look for as pertains to side effects and toxic symptoms.

Troubled U.S. Track Team Explains Loss

By STEVE WILSTEIN

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — No apologies were necessary and nobody wanted to plead sour grapes but the simple fact of the matter is that the U.S. would have beaten a powerful Russian squad hands down for the second straight year in the U.S.-Soviet Union indoor track and field meet last night if the Amateur Athletic union-National Collegiate Athletic Association feud had not depleted and upset the American squad.

"I think the two teams competing tonight were evenly matched," said U.S. Coach Brooks Johnson. "If they had an advantage it was in the fact that our athletes have been bothered by all the feuding and rumors."

Johnson's words were echoed by pentathloner Fred Samara of Penn. "I think the feud and what happened put a burden on everybody and I know that I couldn't concentrate like I should." Samara finished a disappointing fourth in his event.

Lack of concentration, however, was not the key thing that hurt the American team. More important was the absence of some of the nation's finest athletes who wanted to compete but were threatened by the NCAA with loss of eligibility and recriminations against their schools.

Such undergraduate standouts as Olympic gold medal hurdler Rod Milburn of Southern University, national high jump champion Chris Dunn of Colgate and Olympic long jump champion Randy Williams of Southern California all canceled out because of pressure from the NCAA.

It would, therefore, seem less than coincidence that all of those events were won by the Soviet Union.

But the American squad, weakened and troubled as it was, performed admirably. The men's team was beaten 84-76 by the Russians, who dominated the long distance races. But the American women, considered much inferior to their Soviet counterparts, surprised and thrilled the crowd of 9,108 by scoring their second straight upset victory, 65-60.

Robin Campbell, the 14-year old track prodigy from Washington, D.C., became the darling of the meet when she stood the fans on their feet by winning the 880-yard run over two veteran Russian women. Robin, who ran with the poise of a champion, did not stop there, though, as she climaxed the evening with a thrilling gun lap sprint in the medley relay victory.

Herb Washington of Michigan State and Ivory Crockett of Southern Illinois left Russia's Olympic gold medalist Valery Borzov behind as they sped to a photo finish in the 60-yard dash in six seconds flat.

Other American winners on the men's team were George Frenn in the 35-pound weight throw (69-7); Fred Newhouse in the 600-yard run (1:10); and George Woods in the shot put (68-2 ¼).

Martha Watson won the long jump for the U.S. with a leap of 21-4 ¾, Patty Johnson took the 60-yard hurdles (7.6), Kathy Hammond captured the 440-yard dash (55.3), Iris Davis won the 60-yard dash (6.6) and Cheryl Toussaint grabbed the 600.

REDWOOD'S ELDER

Double Victory For Track Star

Darrell Elder of Redwood High School inaugurated the 1973 Marin County Athletic League track and field season yesterday with an outstanding double, winning the shot put with a heave of 56-10½ and the discus with 157-0 as the Giants defeated Drake High, 91-34.

In other MCAL varsity meets yesterday, San Marin defeated Terra Linda, 75-61; Tamalpais topped Novato, 92-42; and San Rafael beat Marin Catholic, 95-39.

"That (Elder's feat) had to be the greatest double in Marin County history," said Bruce Grant, veteran track and field observer and former Tamalpais High coach. Both marks are believed to be among the top five ever achieved by a Marinite.

Mark Kilmer won the high jump and long jump and Pete Hicks the 330-yard low hurdles and triple jump for Redwood.

San Marin's victory in an important early-season clash of contenders was sparked by Terry Kom, who won the high jump, pole vault and 330 lows, and Gary Lathrop, who took the 880 and two-mile.

The winners:

Tamalpais won its first MCAL swim meet of the year, downing Novato, 50-45, at Novato. The Indians' Dick Atwood figured in three wins, and Paul Moe figured in two.

Stout Redwood Pitching Ready

The strong arms of Redwood are ready.

Sophomore Ed Anderson, the third arm on what coach Al Endriss insists is "the best pitching staff ever assembled in the county," threw a two-hit shutout and struck out 10 yesterday as the Giants defeated Montgomery High School, 7-0, in a non-league baseball game in Santa Rosa.

In other games yesterday involving Marin teams, Napa edged San Marin, 5-4; Vallejo shaded Tamalpais, 3-2; St. Ignatius of San Francisco beat San Rafael, 8-7; Vintage of Napa pounded Drake, 14-6; Novato tied De Anza of Richmond, 2-2, in a game called after eight innings due to darkness; and Terra Linda lost to Santa Rosa in eight innings, 7-6.

Redwood (5-2) ace pitchers Mark Ruggles, Gene Frey and Anderson have hurled three straignt complete games, winning them all, striking out 33 and allowing only one run. Anderson yesterday retired the last 13 men he faced.

Doug Hartman hit a solo home run in the sixth inning and a run-scoring doube in the second for the Giants, while Phil Bacigalupi drove in two runs with a homer in the third.

Novato (4-0-1) got three innings of shutout relief pitching from Ray Stratford, making his second appearance since missing much of practice after being hit with a line drive. Stratford saved Thursday's eight-inning, 4-2 victory over Napa as well.

Terra Linda (2-4) gave up two uns in the bottom of the seventh to allow its game to be tied, scored two in the top of the eighth on Greg Watroba's single to go ahead, then surrendered three in the bottom of the eighth to lose.

Tamalpais (2-3) carried a one-run lead into the bottom of the sixth inning, after David Jones drove in a run with a single in the second inning and Tom

Warriors Vs. New York In Oakland Tilt

Golden State played one of its less memorable games of the season Friday night in falling before the Seattle SuperSonics 116-106 on regional television from the Northwest.

The Warriors, once down by as much as 13 points in the final period, closed to within six at 106-100 with 4:12 remaining. But that was the last hurrah.

Spencer Haywood, who recovered from a cold first half in which he was assessed a couple of charging fouls, then scored the next six points of the game and blocked two shots by the Warriors' Rick Barry as Seattle upped its margin to 112-100 and coasted home. The bearded Haywood topped game scorers with 35 points.

The Knicks come to town fresh from a 109-98 thrashing of the Los Angeles Lakers at Inglewood.

Willis Reed, Knicks' center, is healthy and frisky again and that could spell trouble for the Warriors.

A's Hitters Producing Victories

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (UPI) — Reggie Jackson, Joe Rudi and Sal Bando—core of the Oakland A's' batting order—are hitting and the defending world champions are winning.

The A's evened their Cactus League record at 3-3 Friday by edging the Chicago Cubs 3-2 on Bando's two-out pinch single in the seventh off Dave LaRoche.

Rich McKinney singled to open the seventh, advanced on a balk and scored on Bando's hit.

The A's scored twice in the fourth against Burt Hooton when Rudi doubled and Jackson, Gene Tenace and McKinney singled.

Rob Gardner, Paul Lindblad and Horacio Pina pitched three innings each for Oakland. They held the Cubs to seven hits and only one earned run which came in the eighth when Jose Cardenal singled and scored on a double by Billy Williams.

Today the A's and San Francisco Giants meet for the first time this spring at Phoenix.

FUROR IN OAKLAND

Owner Finley Says Seals Act Like Kids

OAKLAND (UPI) — California Seals owner Charles O. Finley has chided his hockey players for acting "like a bunch of kids" in criticizing him and General Manager-Coach Fred Glover.

Finley's remarks hit the team about the same time they blew a two-goal lead in the final period to fall into a 5-5 deadlock with the Pittsburgh Penguins Friday night before 5,180 die-hard fans.

Craig Patrick scored his 17th goal of the season 3:54 into the third period to give the Seals a 5-3 lead. But less than two minutes later, rookie Jim Shires narrowed the margin with his first National Hockey League goal.

Then defenseman Dave Burrows slapped a 40-foot shot through the legs of goalie Gilles Meloche with 2:55 remaining and the Seals had their league-high of 16 ties rather than their 12th victory.

Ten different players shared in the scoring.

Smarting from criticism by some unidentified Seals, Finley said he would meet with the team within a few days in an effort to try to resolve their differences. Rumors are swirling that the National Hockey League board of governors want to buy the California franchise to prevent a mass exodus of players to the rival World Hockey Association.

"Their job is on the ice," said Finley of his dissident players. "They should be concerned with efforts to do what they are paid to do, and they are not being paid to coach or run the front office."

"I have all the faith in the world in Glover," added Finley. "And I don't blame him for the lack of attendance. That is based on how the players perform."

Giants' Juan Has A Tough Act To Follow

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Juan Marichal of the San Francisco Giants has a tough act to follow.

The high-kicking right-hander goes against the Oakland Athletics today after teammates Sam McDowell, Ron Bryant and Frank Reberger of Mill Valley turned in creditable performances Friday against the San Diego Padres in Yuma.

Lefty McDowell got off to a shaky start but settled down for a satisfying five-inning stint as the Giants beat the Padres 5-3 in 10 innings. Bryant, using a new changeup, and Reberger combined to shut out the Padres 3-0 in a morning game which was labeled "unofficial."

San Diego touched McDowell for three runs in the first inning as Big Sam threw 34 pitches. However, he needed only 44 pitches to retire the Pads in order from the second through the fifth frames.

Jim Barr, Elias Sosa and John Morris mopped up for the Giants with Sosa getting the victory.

With two out and the bases loaded in the ninth, Jim Howarth drew a walk to force home the tying run at 3-3. In the next frame, throwing errors by pitcher Ralph Garcia and third baseman Dave Hilton enabled the two winning runs to score.

Singled out for special praise by Giant Manager Charlie Fox was Chris Arnold, who is being converted from an infielder to catcher.

LaPorte Replaces Hale As St. Mary's Cage Coach

Combined AP & UPI

MORAGA — Bruce Hale, father-in-law of National Basketball Association star Rick Barry of the Golden State Warriors, has resigned as head basketball coach at St. Mary's college after his teams compiled a 26-52 record in three seasons, and assistant coach Frank LaPorte, who guided the Gael freshmen to a 50-19 record in three was seasons, was named yesterday to succeed Hale.

LaPorte, a 1956 graduate of St. Mary's, coached Bishop O'Dowd High School of Oakland to 10 Catholic Athletic League championships in 12 years while compiling a 342-73 record. He returned to St. Mary's as freshman coach in 1970.

"I am most grateful for the opportunity," said LaPorte. "I'm aware of the great challenge but have full confidence that, with the cooperation of players, the athletic department, college administrators, faculty and alumni, we can make St. Mary's truly representative on the basketball court."

Hale said he would "start looking for a new job" next week.

CASTRO VALLEY — Bobbie Visinti, a 5-foot-11½ first base hopeful, is fighting mad today because of a California Interscholastic Federation rule.

The rule bars Bobbie from playing baseball with the Canyon High School team because, of all things, she's a girl.

"I have to certify ineligibility lists," lamented principal Robert L. Forbes, "and although you might make a mistake on some things, sex is not one of them."

"Why all this hassle?" she asked. "I love baseball and I love the outdoors. It makes me mad. I just want to play."

Forbes said he disagrees with the CIF rule, too, but will abide by it.

Football

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio — Ernie Holmes, a 6-foot-3, 250-pound defensive tackle for the Pittsburgh Steelers, was held in the Mahoning County Jail today in connection with the wounding of a state highway patrolman and shots fired at several trucks on the instate highways near here.

Holmes, Pittsburgh's eight-round draft pick in 1971 and expected to be a starter next season, was apprehended yesterday shortly after several truck drivers reported they were shot at as they drove along Interstate Highways 80 and 76 in Northeastern Ohio.

Mahoning County sheriff's detective William Johns said no charges were immediately filed and probably wouldn't be any until at least Monday. He said Holmes, 24, was held under no bond, pending the arrival of his attorney.

Holmes was captured in a field near where a late-model luxury car was found abandoned in the area of the shootings. John said Holmes "tossed away his gun and threw up his hands" when he was surrounded by officers in the field.

Golfer Graham Expresses Hope

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Your have to figure that handsome Lou Graham hopes either Homer Blancas or Rod Curl will be putting well when they tee off today in the third round of the $130,000 Jacksonville Open.

Graham, 35, of Nashville, second round co-leader with Jim Colbert at a nine-under par total of 135, will be playing today with Blancas and Curl just as he played with Colbert on Friday.

"It sure helped playing with Jim," Graham said afterward.

Colbert's "inspiration" consisted of holing out from a bunker from 50 feet for a birdie on the fourth hole, dropping in a 25 footer for a par on the fifth and then collecting putts of 4, 15, 16, 15 and 40 feet, all for birdies. Colbert, 32, finished with a seven under par 65, the best round of the tournament. He had an opening round 70.

Graham, the 19th leading money winner last year but with only $2,678 in earnings this year in five starts, got into the Colbert swing of things as he parlayed a hot putter into seven birdies and two bogeys for a 67 to go with his 68 Thursday.

Blancas, the 35 year old veteran from Houston, was one stroke behind Graham and Colbert. He shot a 69 Friday and said he was putting well though he admitted being bothered by the high winds.

Jack Nicklaus, finding the greens at the 7,088 yard Deerwood country club tough to putt, struggled in with a 73 that gave him a 142 score, putting him far back in the field. Defending champion Tony Jacklin had a 72 for a 143 total and Billy Casper failed to make the 144 cutoff with a 75 Friday for a 146 total.

Two strokes behind the leaders were Allen Miller, Curl and Dave Marad, at 137. Miller shot a 70 Friday. Curl had a 67 and Marad a 68.

First round leader Johnny Miller, who had a opening 66, fell back to a five-way tie at 138 on Friday with his even par round and it appeared that playing with a dejected Nicklaus dragged his own game down. Jack was hitting the ball from tee to green with his usual power but he couldn't hole a putt.

Bunched, with Miller, were Dan Sikes, Doug Sanders, Jim Wiechers, and Charlie Sifford, all within striking distance next at 139 were Charlie Owens, Steve Melnyk, Frank Beard, Don Massengale and DeWitt Weaver.

Bears Win 1st Pro Football Title Go

By DAVE BRASE and TIM SIMONS

CHICAGO — Some 25,000 fans are on hand at Chicago's Wrigley Field to see the New York Giants, representing the Eastern Division, play the Western Division champions, the Chicago Bears, in the first National Football League championship game on Dec. 17, 1933.

The Giants have a very diversified offense. Their tailback Harry Newman is a good passer and Ken Strong is always a dangerous running threat.

The driving force in the Chicago attack is their 235 pound fullback, Bronko Nagurski.

At the outset both teams establish wide open game strategies, but the scoring in the first half is limited to a touchdown pass by the Giants' Newman and two field goals by Chicago's Jack Manders.

Another Manders' field goal in the third period puts the Bears on top 9-7. But their lead is short-lived. Newman's passing takes the Giants 73 years for another touchdown.

The game continues in this exciting see-saw manner. Now time is running out and the Bears trail 21-16. They need a break and get one. A poor punt gives them the ball on the New York 47 yard line.

A pass to Nagurski nets the Bears 14 yards. It's Nagurski again. He takes a handoff and heads towards the line. Suddenly he jumps up and throws a pass over the middle to right end Bill Hewitt. A Giant defender moved in and Hewitt laterals the ball to Bill Karr. Karr races to the end zone and scores the game winning touchdown.

The Bears have come from behind in dramatic fashion, and have captured the first NFL championship game, 23-21.

STATISTICS SHOW

Defense, Rebounding Key Tar '5' Success

In case you were wondering why College of Marin had such a successful basketball season, with 27 victories in 32 games, consider these items:

The Tars held their opponents to a shooting percentage of 34.4 per cent, and outrebounded them by an average of 44-29 each game.

Consider also that four of their five starters averaged in double figures, and the fifth man scored just a shade under nine a game, giving them the "balanced scoring" coaches rhapsodize about so much.

Final statistics show all-state forward Wil Garner as the team leader in most important categories with 470 field goal attempts, 246 made, a percentage of 52.3, scoring average of 19.3, and rebounding average of 10.3 based on 119 rebounds on offense and 181 on defense.

Garner's 552 points placed him fourth on the Tars all-time list for one season, with guard Joe Smith's 600 in 1971 the record.

Sophomore forward Joe Casteel moved into eighth place in career scoring with 723 points and soph guard Joe DeMaestri took over ninth with 690.

Casteel led the 1972-73 Tars in assists with 63, and DeMaestri led the regulars in free throw percentage with 78.8 per cent. Reserve guard Rich Hagler set a team record with 84 per cent free throw accuracy, 21 of 25.

Marin shot 42.2 per cent from the floor for the year, with center Neil Traub hitting 49.3 per cent, DeMaestri 42.7, Casteel 38.9 and guard Len Smith 36.8. DeMaestri was the second-leading scorer at 13.6, followed by Casteel at 12.5, Traub at 10.2 and Smith at 8.7.

The Tars and their opponents shot virtually identically at the free-throw line, 64.9 per cent for Marin and 64.3 for the foes, but when Marin's defense had a chance to operate the shooting was nowhere near identical. Marin outscored its foes by an average of 76-59.

Top rebounders besides Garner were Traub and Casteel at 8.5 per game apiece.

Anderson Fires 35, Novato Golfers Win

Rick Anderson shot an even-par 35 yesterday to lead Novato High School to a 189-197 victory over Redwood in a non-league golf match at the Hornets' Indian Valley course.

The match among San Marin, Marin Catholic and Justin of Napa at Napa's Silverado course was called off, and will be played "sometime in May," according to San Marin coach Andy Frauenhofer.

MISS WALSH SELECTED FOR TEAM

For the third straight year, Sharon Walsh of San Rafael has been named to the U.S. Federation Cup tennis team, the U.S. Lawn Tennis Association announced today.

Miss Walsh, 21, will join three other girls in the international women's team competition, to be held April 30-May 6 in Bad Homburg, West Germany.

Other members are playing captain Linda Tuero of New Orleans, La., Patti Hogan of La Jolla, Calif., and Janice Metcalf of Claremont, Calif.

Redwood Plays Tie In Tennis

Redwood High School's tennis team played a 3-3 tie with highly-regarded Lowell of San Francisco yesterday in a non-league match at Redwood, extending the Giants' unbeaten streak to 39 matches.

The Giants (2-0-1) got victories from Colin Reeve and Bruce Manheim in singles and Fred Chang-Brandon Hill in doubles. The fifth singles match between Redwood's Tom Jasek and Lowell's Eugene Reyes was called with Reyes ahead, 6-3, 0-3.

In other matches, San Rafael (2-1) swamped Vallejo, 6-1, behind wins by Mark Sabbella, Bill Sockolov, John Harry, Dave Peugh, Bob Hoffman-John Lucey and Al Galleri-Tom Collins, while San Marin (1-1) lost to Napa, 5-2, despite wins by John Kelly and Don Goldbeck.

Miss Arrighi Places

MOSCOW, Idaho — Cookie Arrighi of San Rafael, representing the University of California at Davis, placed second in the 200-yard individual medley (2:12.9) and third in the 100 I.M. (1:03.1) in the week-long competition in the Women's National Collegiate Athletic Association Swim Championships.

MARIN BOWLING

Near-Perfecto At Greenbrae

A near-perfect game and two upcoming tournaments highlight developments in Marin County bowling.

Bob MacArthur of Pacifica rolled a 299 game Wednesday in the California Trophy Travel League at Greenbrae Lanes; he bowled 11 consecutive strikes before leaving the seven pin on the 12th ball. The pin wiggled but didn't fall. He has never had a 300-game.

TOURNAMENT TIME. Two tourneys are on tap next weekend. The main event is the Marin County Junior Masters Tournament next Saturday and Sunday at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael. Squad times are 3 p.m. and 6 Saturday. Bowlers, who can sign up at Country Club Bowl until 3 p.m. Saturday, will be divided into two classes. Class A, for bowlers with averages of 155 and over, will use four games; class B, for bowlers with averages at 154 or under, will bowl three games.

The top eight scores from each class will qualify for the finals Sunday at 3 p.m. in head-to-head matches, double elimination. The event is sponsored by the Marin County Junior Bowling Association.

NAVE LANES will hold its 200 Classic next Sunday at 10:30 a.m. Bowlers who have rolled a 200 game in Nave league competition can sign up until the Sunday starting time.

Bowlers will roll three games in a qualifying round with contestants sporting the eight top scores advancing into the finals. In the finals, the eighth qualifier will play number seven: the winner will face the bowler with the sixth best qualifying score. Thus, the top qualifier automatically qualifies for the finals. Some 70 entrants are expected to compete.

THERE OUGHT TO BE A LAW. Don Midyett had games of 247 and 254 in the Elks League Tuesday night at Country Club Bow. With such scores, it is fair to conclude that a sparkling 700 series is very possible. However, the chief criminal investigator in the Marin County District Attorney's office managed only a 160 in the first game, which coincides nicely with his 167 average.

LARRY JONES of Concord had the week's top series in Marin County, a 704. He bowled games of 227, 235 and 242 last Friday night in the North Bay Classic at Country Club Bowl.

KUDOS ARE extended to junior bowler Fred Rackey of Novato who rolled a healthy 255 game in his 666 series at Nave Lanes last Saturday.

GUTTER GREAT. Donna Sabraw bowled seven strikes in a row during a 248 game Wednesday night at Nave Lanes. She was bowling in the Gutter Society league.

Collins scored on an error in the fifth, but Vallejo tallied twice in the sixth to win.

San Marin's (1-3-1) Marty Nagle doubled home two runs in the top of the seventh inning, but the Mustangs surrendered two to Napa in the bottom of the seventh to lose.

San Rafael (1-4) rallied for four runs in the top of the seventh but couldn't catch St. Ignatius. Craig Saunders and Mike Farris had RBI singles in the uprising, and two other runs scored on errors.

The game originally was scheduled for Albert Field in San Rafael but was moved to San Francisco at S.I.'s request.

Drake (1-4) continued to have pitching problems, and has given up eight or more runs in four of its five games this year.

Marin Catholic's game at Healdsburg was called off due to a mixup in scheduling and will be played next Saturday at 1 p.m. at Healdsburg.

BIRTHDAY QUIZ

By GORDON B. GREB

Happy St. Patrick's Day! Sure and 'tis a fine day for telling an Irish birthday story, told to me by the fairyfolk.

Imagine all the great people born today arguing as to whose profession is the oldest. What an argument it would be! See what they say and try to guess why the last man wins out?

1. NAT (KING) COLE, singer and pianist, makes a strong case for music as being the oldest. During the 44 years of his career, Nat proved he knew that music goes all the way back to "Nature Boy," one of his hits. And that's his argument, saying, "Look, friends, music can be traced to the Garden of Eden. Wasn't it the siren song of Eve that temped Adam?"

2. FRANK BUCK, who in his lifetime (1882-1950) achieved fame as an explorer and adventurer in the wilds of Africa, doesn't agree. He insists his profession is older, arguing: "That may be true. But what makes men roam the world and go to the moon? It's curiosity, the love of adventure. Adam wouldn't have eaten the forbidden apple without it."

3. ROGER B. TANEY, former Chief Justice of the United States, disagrees completely. And quite naturally, too, since it was his decision in the "Dred Scott" case in 1857 which declared a Negro could not be a citizen, because he thought the law said so. "Gentlemen, the profession of law is oldest! Without it, how do you suppose in this universe we ever managed to create order out of chaos?"

4. JOHN O. PASTORE, 66 today, won the day. This U.S. Senator and long-time member of Congress made his point with one comment. Question: What was it?

ANSWER: "As a Senator, I ask you gentlemen to consider — who created the chaos in the first place!"

West's Heart Bid Is Vital To Six-Spade Slam Action

It would be very easy to lose the slam in today's hand. Probably you'd be sensible enough to stop at game, but the actual declarer was on the short end of the score in a team match and therefore bid the slam in an effort to catch up.

HEART ACTION

West opened the king of hearts and continued with another heart. South ruffed and wondered how to play the trumps and which side suit to work on.

The answer comes to you, even without peeking, if you consider the bidding. West has bid two hearts with practically no high cards. What made him so bold?

The answer must be: good distribution. West must be very short in some suit. The most likely suit is spades, and South should therefore play West for a singleton spade.

SIDE SUIT SETTLED

This automatically settled the question of which side suit to work on. South must use his own trumps for drawing trumps and for ruffing hearts. He cannot afford to ruff diamonds as well. Hence he must use dummy's trumps to ruff clubs, and he must try to develop the clubs rather than the diamonds.

Declarer cashed the ace of clubs, ruffed a club in dummy, took the king of spades and successfully finessed with the jack of spades. He next ruffed another club in dummy, returned to his hand by ruffing a heart and drew the last trump.

He could then claim the rest with two good clubs and dummy's top diamonds.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold:
♠ - Q 7 3
♥ - A J 10 9 4 3.
♦ - Q

ANSWER: Pass.

You have 11 points in high cards and two points for the singleton, but the hand isn't even close to being worth an opening bid. Beware of counting four points for that singleton queen of diamonds.

False Cancer Readings Seen In Lubricant

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government has announced the recall of an aerosol lubricant that may give false readings of cervical cancer for women undergoing Pap smears.

The Food and Drug Administration said Thursday that about 40,000 cans of Lubrifoam are estimated to be on the market and another 53,000 cans are being held in warehouses.

The agency said that Guar Gum used in the spray may give false positive or negative results in glass slides because vegetable cells in the product may resemble cancer cells.

TROUBLED STEPCHILDREN

Life On A Montana Reservation

Sitting Bull, Sioux chief

POPLAR, Mont. — There was a moment on the rolling, nearly treeless Fort Peck Indian Reservation near here when a visitor stood alone on a snowy hill. In any direction he could see 100 miles or more. Here and there a small farm broke the cold, winter landscape.

In that brief moment the world seemed to stop, and there were no sounds — not birds, not the wind, not even the distant, low growl of a moving train or truck. All was total silence.

Above all else it is this natural silence and closeness to open land that is the ancestral touchstone of the Assiniboin and Sioux Indian tribes which now call this two-million-acre reservation home.

While today they retain their access to silence, they have been for decades the troubled stepchildren of a less-than-equitable government bureaucracy.

Until 1924, their conquerors refused even to recognize them as citizens of the United States. And their open land was narrowed down to two million acres by an act of Congress in 1888. Once they roamed freely over 200 million acres, hunting buffalo and living in their own spiritual consonance with the land. Today they are caught somewhere between the echo of the past and the hurt of the present.

Not even the reservation is totally theirs now. In 1908 by deception or agreement — no one is sure which — the reservation was opened to homesteaders, which meant that the white man could move onto the reservation. Today the approximately 4,250 Assiniboin and Sioux Indians are a minority on their own reservation. There are nearly 11,000 non-Indians who live on the reservation and control the 159 businesses clustered in the four small towns within its boundaries.

The face of the reservation runs the full scale of contrasts — too much poverty alongside too little prosperity.

Drunkenness on one corner, friendship on another.

Hope and warmth in one family, suicide in too many others. Shantytown shacks next to modern tract homes.

Working farms in the shadows of abandoned barns.

Gone are the white traders and trappers from along the muddy Missouri River, which forms the southern border of the reservation and passes by the towns of Brockton, Poplar, Wolfe Point, and Oswego. Now there are the non-Indian-owned stores and many taverns.

In front of them are battered pickup trucks parked alongside Detroit's newest models.

On Friday and Saturday nights in Poplar, a winning local high-school basketball team —named the Indians — packs the crowds into the gymnasium. But only one Indian athlete wears a gold uniform, and the number of Indians in the stands can be counted on both hands.

A stranger is treated politely here, but years of deception dictate the Indian's hesitancy to talk freely with non-Indians concerning Indian ways. "We'll let you in the tepee," said one young Indian with a proud, wry smile, "but you'll hear only what we want you to hear."

Ken Ryan, the director of the reservation's federally funded Headstart program, tried to put his tribe's most immediate problem in historical perspective: "The white man made the Indian dependent on money, but he didn't show us how to make money."

In 1969, the per capita income of Indians in Montana averaged around $1,000. During the winter months the unemployment level on the Fort Peck reservation reaches a staggering 65 per cent. "Our people don't care too much for welfare," said Stanley Yellow Robe, a member of the tribal council, "but we got to live."

In an attempt to bring jobs to the reservation, the tribal leaders established the Fort Peck Tribal Industries, Inc., in 1968. Taking over an old National Guard armory in 1969, the tribe won a government contract to inspect and overhaul M-1 rifles. Nearly 120 Indians went to work.

The tribe also created a 40-acre industrial park near the main line of the Great Northern Railway and attracted the C&M Construction Company, makers of prefabricated houses, from Billings, Mont. The company employs 20 Indians.

"We have people here with all kinds of skills," said Joe Red Thunder, chairman of the tribal council, "and we will do what we can to attract work for them."

Their eagerness to work is not challenged. At one point, when nearly 28 jobs were about to open up, over 700 Indians applied.

But finding jobs is not the only difficulty.

"Every critical problem that develops in families here," said Jack Pipe, a recovered alcoholic who directs the reservation's alcoholic program, "is almost always related to alcohol. And the only time something is done is when a crisis develops."

For Pipe, a Korean War veteran, the crisis came after 15 years of drinking. In an alcoholic stupor he drove his car right through the front of his house.

"I couldn't believe I had done it, but it shook me up like nothing else had done before." Clean for three years, he says, "I feel wonderful."

In two and a half years of effort, Pipe and his fellow workers — all recovered alcoholic Indians — have treated 157 alcoholics out of approximately 700 identified on the reservation. Attendance at their once-a-week Alcoholics Anonymous meetings grew from a handful in the beginning to at least 30 at each meeting now. Also, a modest halfway house has been established on the reservation.

Above him, on his office wall as he talked, a small poster offered an Indian prayer: "Great Spirit, grant that I may not criticize my neighbor until I have walked a mile in his moccasins."

The tribe, through a $67,000 grant from the Presbyterian Church, has also established a home — Hope Ranch —for Indian children caught up in a family crisis. "In the past," said Ann Lambert, director of the Hope Ranch, "we had to place children with foster parents nearly always off the reservation. In some cases this meant that the children were eventually adopted by non-Indian families."

Hope Ranch, 10 slow years in coming, is the realization of the effort "to cope with our problems right here on the reservation," said Miss Lambert, a Sioux Indian. "Our objective is to work with the families and children and get them back together again." Currently there are eight happy children at the home located just outside of Poplar. "We have a long waiting list," said Miss Lambert.

In the face of the reservation's devastating problems — including a suicide rate three times the national average — the tribe's increased efforts over the last five years reflect the small but significant emergence of a new attitude.

"Indians are beginning to assert themselves," said Ken Ryan, a University of Montana graduate whose grandfather bore the name "His Black Horse."

"Some of the educated Indians are returning to their reservations," Mr. Ryan observed. "The time is ripe to build. The Indian has a lot of patience. We have been at the bottom too long. Now we are coming back up, if we can hold on just a little longer. You'll find young Indians wearing beads proudly and walking proudly, and half-breeds are now identifying themselves as Indians."

With full tuitions paid by the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA), 140 Indians from Fort Peck are attending colleges this year. In 1966 only 18 were enrolled in schools of higher education.

In this transition from tepee dwellers on the plains to rural citizens on a reservation, most Indians have a love-hate relationship with the Bureau of Indian Affairs, the federal agency charged with overseeing Indian concerns.

"By law," said Robert Dusenbury, resources manager for the BIA at Fort Peck, "we are in a thrust position concerning Indian land. We are to assist them in obtaining the highest possible income from the land." This could be income from grazing land, farming, mineral or even oil rights.

The BIA's responsibility springs from a congressional act in 1908 in which each Indian at Fort Peck was given over 360 acres of land. Down through the years, as owners have passed away, as families have grown and individuals have left the reservation, establishing heirship and securing approvals have grown into a bureaucratic nightmare.

"In 1973," said Dusenbury, "the average number of heirs who share ownership in a parcel is 18 people. And we must treat all owners equally even though many people share different percentages. One 2,000-acre parcel has 960 owners. Often the stamp on the letter we send to them is worth more than any income they might receive."

Dusenbury blames congressional ignorance about Indians and a lack of foresight for the extent of the problem. "I think Congress assumed that by 1973, or probably much sooner, the Bureau of Indian Affairs would not exist and the Indian would be totally assimilated into the white culture."

An Indian who resisted assimilation is Norman Hollow, a lean, hard-working family man and rancher, who has been involved in tribal politics for 28 years.

He can remember when Fort Peck was part of the "dust bowl" during the depression years and cattle sold for $5 a head. "It was a hard existence," he said, "but my obligation is to my Indian people, not the BIA."

He believes his people would be better off today if they had not agreed to the gift of the land parcels. "We would have held it all (the entire reservation) under tribal ownership," he said. "It could have been a wonderful enterprise."

What the past could have been and what the present is are two stark realities when Indians come face to face with their chaotic legal rights. Deceived, robbed, murdered, and treated like children in the past, the reservation Indian today hangs in legal limbo.

What future lies ahead for the reservation will perhaps be shaped by Indian men and women who agree with the sentiments of Ken Ryan:

"I prefer to be here. I feel at home, and I wouldn't want to be anything else but an Assiniboin Indian. I see great gentleness here, great care, great wisdom."

FOLK SONG MASS — The Church of the Nativity, 333 Ellen Drive, Lucas Valley, will be the scene tomorrow for the American Folk Song Mass, first of its kind to be written in the United States.

Folk Mass Scheduled At Nativity

The choir at the Church of the Nativity, 333 Ellen Drive, Lucas Valley, will present the American Folk Song Mass at 10 a.m. tomorrow.

The mass is the first of its kind to be written in the United States. Its composer, Rev. Ian Mitchell, has traveled widely performing the mass in churches of all denominations. It is now performed all over the world, the lively quality and the informality of guitar accompaniment making it universally popular.

The joyous music will be complemented by a variety of hymns and anthems in the folk style.

The 10 a.m. service tomorrow is to show the blend of the Church of the Nativity for the season of Lent and life in today's world, according to Vicar David Barnette. The origins of Lent go back at least as early as the second century and may be traced in the development of fasts and other ascetical exercises leading to baptism at Easter time.

The Church of the Nativity looks forward to offering a positive program of spiritual growth, a program of learning, de-emphasizing the old rigors of discipline and self-denial, Vicar Barnette said. This year the Church of the Nativity offers a "Trio of Titans" followed by dessert and dialogue.

The trio consists of Carl Jung, Martin Buber, and Teilhard de Chardin — the first a psychiatrist, the second a theologian, the third a priest and paleontologist.

Nativity on Sunday evenings will meet at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, San Rafael, for a sherry hour at 5:30 p.m., film strip at 6:15 on the work of Jung, Buber and de Chardin, followed by coffee, dessert, and dialogue.

The schedule for Sunday evenings includes: March 18, Carl Jung; March 25, Martin Buber; and April 1 and 8, Teilhard de Chardin. Hence the title "A Trio of Titans"!

All services, holy communion, or morning prayer, are under the direction of Vicar Barnette and his assistant, Glyn W. Pohl.

Tomorrow's service begins at 10 a.m. Nativity is hard to find the first time. Exit from 101 to Lucas Valley Road. Turn right on Las Gallinas for an eighth of a block, then climb the hill.

Ecological Suicide No New Phenomenon

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Two myths have arisen in recent years about the threat of environmental disaster which hangs over modern civilization.

The first is that it is a new kind of danger. It isn't. Abuse of his environment has plagued man from his earliest beginnings, even destroyed ancient civilizations.

The second is that our cavalier treatment of nature has its philosophical roots in the Judeo-Christian teachings, especially the Biblical concept that God in creating man gave him "dominion" over all other creatures and things.

This notion was first advanced by Zen Buddhist Daisetz Szuki, and has been given wide currency in contemporary America by Dr. Lynn White Jr., professor of history at the University of California in Los Angeles.

Neither idea will stand up under an attentive study of history, according to Dr. Rene Dubos, professor emeritus of environmental biology at Rockefeller Institute in New York.

In his new book, "A God Within," Dubos says:

"All over the globe and at all times in the past, men have pillaged nature and disturbed the ecological equilibrium, usually out of ignorance, but also because they have always been more concerned with immediate advantages than with long range goals."

These short-sighted depredations led to the death of many ancient civilizations that never were exposed to the teachings of the Judeo-Christian Bible.

For example, a great civilization flourished from about 2500 to 1500 B.C. on the plains of the Indus River in what is now Pakistan.

Archaeological explorations in recent years have yielded convincing evidence that this so-called Mohenjo-Daro civilization died simply from wearing out its landscape.

Whereas the Indus River civilization seems to have perished slowly, the great Mayan civilization of Mexico apparently succumbed suddenly around 750 B.C. Dubos thinks the primary cause was "the fact that the productive forests of the region had been cut" prodigally. The Mayans used lots of wood as fuel for burning lime to make mortar for the awesome temples which still stand as tombstones to their lost civilization. When a period of heavy rains came, there were no forests to halt destructive flooding and erosion, and Mayan civilization simple sank into the mud.

Similar mismanagement of forests and grasslands helped to make barren deserts of areas in Mesopotamia, Northern China, Egypt and Persia, where magnificent civilizations developed thousands of years ago. None of these areas were at any time under JudeoChristian influence, so each of them constitutes a massive hole in the Suzuki-White thesis.

Equally vulnerable to historical scrutiny is the popular idea that raping the environment is a folly characteristic of advanced civilizations.

Actually, Dubos points out, misuse of nature, with consequent disaster, is a human propensity which antedates the earliest civilizations.

At the very beginning of the Neolithic period, when our human ancestors were just beginning to practice agriculture on a fairly extensive scale, there was "a dramatic extinction of large mammals and terrestrial birds" which are now known to us only by their fossils. They apparently were killed off by Neolithic man in his eagerness to protect his newly-cultivated fields and flocks.

Even in modern times, wanton destruction of nature is not confined to technological societies. The nomadic aborigines of Australia have a bad habit of clearing land by setting fires. This has led to widespread destruction of vegetation cover, erosion and extinction of many native species of birds and animals.

"Environmental degradation in the modern world is commonly traced to technological excesses, but the roots of the problem go far deeper," Dubos says.

"The solution to the environmental crisis will not be found in a retreat from the JudeoChristian tradition or from technological civilization. Rather it will require a new definition of progress, based on better knowledge of nature and on a willingness to change our ways of life accordingly."

There is proof it can be done. In Japan, agriculture has remained highly productive for more than 1,000 years without decreasing the fertility of the soil or spoiling the beauty of the landscape. In Western Europe, many areas that remain fertile and lovely today have been in continuous cultivation for several thousand years.

FATHER MASANTE
To conduct mission

An Italian Mission Is Planned

Rev. Dr. Sylvio D. Masante, OSJ, will conduct an Italian Mission at St. Raphael's Mission Chapel from March 22 through 25.

Father Masante is rector of Oblates of St. Joseph in Tomales and director of vocation for the Jesuit Society.

Born in Italy, Fr. Masante studied at Oblates of St. Joseph seminaries at Asti, Canelli, Trino and Rome in Italy; Sorbonne University in Paris; Harvard University, Mexico City University and Pan American University, Saltillo, Mexico.

He received his bachelor of arts from Harvard, his master's from Mexico City University and a Doctor of Letters from Pan American.

An international correspondent for "Osservatore Romano," he has visited all the nations of Europe.

Services during the Italian Mission will begin at 7:30 p.m. and the closing will be Sunday morning, March 25, with Mass and general communion.

Gospel Music Concert Slated

Dick Feltmar, Jewish Christian from Los Angeles, will appear in a gospel music concert at the Valley Baptist Church, 3 North San Pedro Road, at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, according to Rev. Warren A. Conrad.

Feltmar is a trained vocalist, having studied five years for the musical stage, and has often been referred to as "the Mario Lanza of gospel music" Pastor Conrad said.

Gospel songs and sacred classics will make up the basis of his program, in which he will be accompanied electronically by full orchestra, as well as piano. His recordings will be made available at the concert.

Training Course Set In End War Program

The Mill Valley United Methodist Church is sponsoring a training course, "Working for a World Without War in Your Church," designed for persons who want to involve their church in ongoing work for a world without war.

The courses will be held at the Mill Valley United Methodist Church, Camino Alto and Sycamore, Mill Valley, beginning at 7:45 on March 27 and continuing for five Tuesday evenings. A course fee of $6 covers materials and books.

The course will introduce participants to the major current approaches to peace, various contexts for considering war — peace questions, what is required to end war, the church and war, the role of the church in work to end war, and resources for action by the local church.

The course, to be led by staff from the World Without War Council of Northern California, is part of the World Without War program the Mill Valley Church recently began.

The WWW program is designed to sustain serious and continuing work within the church to end war. "We urge other churches to begin similar programs," said Walt Schaller, the church's peace interne, "This course is an excellent way to begin."

MECHANIC CHRISTIAN, NOT LORD

TORONTO, Can. — Cecil Brenton, garage mechanic, used to think it paid to be honest. Now he's not so sure.

When he tightened a loose spark plug wire free of charge, he didn't know a newspaper was testing the honesty of mechanics by driving the same malfunctioning car from garage to garage. The resulting story singling him out as an honest man swamped Brenton with calls, letters, interviews and even invitations to speak.

"I'm not used to all this publicity," said the squat, cherubic mechanic. "I'm a Christian, a Catholic, but I'm no bug on honesty. All I did was what I always do. There wasn't anything wrong with the car so I didn't charge anything."

The worst of it is, the garage in which Brenton works has been getting so much business they can't handle it.

"I don't know what these people expect. Just because I put a wire on for nothing, I wonder if people expect to get their work done for nothing. We charge competitive prices. One lady customer came in with a bill of $250 from another garage. She wanted me to do something about it.

"What could I do, for heaven's sake. I'm a Christian, but I'm not the Lord. She was asking for a miracle," Brenton concluded plaintively.

Human Suffering Pointed Out In Church Appeal

NEW YORK (UPI) — Lutheran World Relief, announcing its annual spring appeal for blankets, children's clothing, sweaters and men's work clothes, said there is "no letup in the flow of tragic news about human suffering."

"Sometimes we are numbed by the sheer multitude of people in God's creation who are burdened with hunger, cold, illness — each in his own agony," the Rev. Ove R. Nielsen said in a letter to pastors of the American Lutheran Church, the Lutheran Church in America, and the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, asking their cooperation in the drive.

LWR is the overseas aid agency of the three major Lutheran denominations in the United States. For the past 27 years, it has been helping people around the world.

Faith Lutheran Slates Lecture

"Living in Tune With the Infinite" will be the topic of a lecture tomorrow by Roy Eugene Davis at Faith Lutheran Church, 355 Los Ranchitos Road, San Rafael.

The lecture is scheduled at 2 p.m. Davis, author of 10 books and a well-known teacher of higher meditation methods, is a disciple of Paramahansa Yogananda.

Catholic Overseas Aid To Hold Annual Appeal

The annual appeal of the American Catholic Overseas Aid Fund in the Catholic parishes throughout the United States will begin on Monday, March 26, and will culminate with a special collection in the churches of the San Francisco Archdiocese on the fourth Sunday of Lent, April 1, according to Monsignor Timothy E. O'Brien, Diocesan appeal director.

The annual collection provides the major funding for the emergency relief and developmental programs of Catholic Relief Services-USCC which, last year alone, reached an estimated 20 million impoverished men, women and children in some 68 countries throughout the world, including the victims of the Managua, Nicaragua, disaster.

Also benefiting from this appeal will be the charities of Pope Paul, the Refugee and Migration Office of the United States Catholic Conference and the Catholic Seamen's Clubs.

The national goal of the 1973 American Catholic Overseas Aid Fund is $10 million, the minimum amount needed to allow the organizations benefiting from the appeal to continue their vital work. Americans of all faiths are urged to support this most worthwhile appeal; your tax-deductible contribution will be gratefully received at your nearest Catholic Church.

Jazz Pianist Will Play For Worship

Ken Uston, jazz pianist, and Margie Baker, vocalist, will provide the musical setting tomorrow for the celebration of worship at the Community Congregational Church, 145 Rock Hill Drive, Tiburon.

The 10 a.m. service will be held outdoors if weather permits and is open to the public.

Mystical Experience Is Real And Available

By LOUIS CASSELS
U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Mystical experience is real and is available to all who truly seek it.

That assurance comes from Methodism's woman theologian, Georgia Harkness. In her new book, "Mysticism —Its Meaning and Message" (Abingdon), she says the current upsurge of popular interest in mysticism can be a great thing —provided people understand what genuine mysticism is, and what it is not.

"Mysticism is not astrology, fortune-telling, clairvoyance, or spiritualism in any of the forms usually connoted by this term. It is not mental telepathy or anything which commonly goes by the name of extra-sensory perception. It is not visions, auditions, locations, or raptures. In short, it is not something superstitious or supernatural in the sense of occult."

Her own definition of mysticism is "communion of the human spirit with God," saying that this communion with God is "the very life of religion."

"Without such communion, religion may still exist as ritualistic folkways, or injunctions to morality, or as the social imperatives of human behavior including many sturdy efforts to remake the world. These pursuits are by no means to be disparaged. Given the right goals, they are vitally important. Yet without communion with God, in which mysticism centers, religion fades out and secularism reigns."

Dr. Harkness repudiates the common notion that mystical experience is a rare state "in which one is lifted out of himself and his world and into a state of ecstasy in which he sees visions and hears supernatural voices."

While some mystics have such experiences, she says, mystical experience also occurs with equal validity in the lives of ordinary persons as they engage in "personal prayer and worship" and as they learn through constant practice to recognize the presence of God in all events and activities of their everyday lives.

Mystical experience, in this sense of direct and intimate awareness of living in the presence of God, is open to anyone who is willing to pay the price, she says, but it "costs more of us than we are usually willing to give."

"Full communion with God involves a self-giving that claims the entire person, thinking, feeling, willing and doing," Dr. Harkness asserts. The first requirement is simple "purity of heart and life" —a sincere striving for "human goodness" in daily life and personal relationships.

There also must be readiness to surrender one's own will, ambitions and desires completely to the will of God. This does not necessarily mean renouncing all worldly pleasures. It just means putting God —and the desire for communion with him —above all else in our scale of values.

Some mystical experiences may occur spontaneously and unexpectedly. But most are the result of careful preparation which involves an earnest endeavor "to quiet one's mind and conflicting emotions so that one can hear the voice and feel the presence of God," says Dr. Harkness.

"So difficult is this to do with any thoroughness that most of us do not make the effort, whatever our so-called devotions," she says but adds that the effort is well worth making, for its fruit "can be the assurance that one does not have to carry his burdens alone."

Baha'i Members Will Observe Their New Year

Members of the Baha'i Community of Marin County will join others around the world in observing Naw-Ruz, the Baha'i New Year, on March 21. Naw-Ruz translated means New Day.

Baha'is and guests will observe Naw-Ruz at 6:30 p.m. March 20 with dinner at Alexander Hall in the Theological Seminary at San Anselmo.

Prior to Naw-Ruz, Baha'is the world over observe a 19-day period of fasting from sunrise to sunset to refresh and reinvigorate the spiritual forces latent in each individual.

The Baha'i New Year coincides with the advent of spring, a time which mankind naturally associates with renewal and rebith.

Atrocious System Subsidizes Crime

California Atty. Gen. Evelle J. Younger last week quoted some statistics that we all should think about. He said:

"In the 11-year period from 1960 to 1971, the total of the seven major felonies committed in California more than doubled per 100,000 population. In 1960, there were 1,585 felonies per 100,000 population, and in 1971, there were 3,527.

"The robbery rate increased from 96 per 100,000 population in 1960 to 234 per 100,000 in 1971. The burglary rate increased from 881 per 100,000 population in 1960 to 1,940 per 100,000 population in 1971."

TAKEN BY themselves, these figures might cause us to believe that police are not doing their job of apprehending criminals. This, however, is not the case, according to the state attorney general.

"Our police are more efficient at detecting and apprehending criminals than they have ever been," he declared. "But in my opinion, our citizens are more insecure than they have been for 100 years."

How can this be? Let's listen to a little more of what Younger had to say:

"We have been doing something wrong," he declared. "We have spent billions of dollars in our nation in the last decade trying to rehabilitate narcotic addicts — but we haven't had much success; each year there are more addicts. We send fewer people to prison for serious crime, and grant parole more often and faster for offenders convicted of aggravated assault and robbery, and violent crime increases. Your chances of getting assaulted, robbed or murdered are greater than at any time since the turn of the century."

CONSIDER THIS: During the 1960-70 decade, the population of California increased by about 25 per cent.

During the same decade, the population of San Quentin Prison decreased by about 70 per cent, and other state prisons showed similar decreases.

But during the same period, according to the figures quoted by Attorney General Younger, violent crime in California per 100,000 population, more than doubled. The total of violent crimes increased some two and one-half times, while the total prison population declined by nearly three-fourths.

WHAT HAPPENED to all the criminals? Did they just go "scot free"?

Well, not exactly. A lot of them were caught. But few of them went to prison.

Last year, said the attorney general, "less than 20 per cent of those persons convicted and sentenced in California Superior Courts for selling heroin were sent to prison."

That's heroin, remember! Not "pot," not some "innocent, non-addictive drug" as marijuana's defenders pretend it is. Heroin, the most addictive, most deadly form of narcotic that we have! And Younger was not talking about users. He was talking about the death peddlers who think so little of their fellow humans that they willingly subject them to this foul stuff to make a dishonest buck.

HERE ARE SOME more figures Younger quoted:

Last year, of 1,268 who were convicted in our state's superior courts of armed robbery, 500 did not go to prison. Of 382 convicted of first degree burglary (which, in most cases, means the burglar was armed), 240 did not go to prison. Of 254 ex-convicts convicted of possession of deadly weapons, only 40 went to prison.

No, the rest did not go "scot free" — not quite. They were put on parole. They were turned loose on their promise to be good guys. It was left to county probation departments to see that they remained "good guys."

But it is impossible for county probation departments to do this. The convicted felon already has demonstrated his contempt for law; certainly it is unrealistic to expect him to cooperate 100 per cent with the probation department. Certainly it is mere fantasy to suppose that he will stay where the probation department tells him to stay, that he will abjure all association with his former criminal cronies, that he will magically become a law-abiding citizen merely because our courts, on the pretense of "rehabilitation," have been so kind as to give him that chance.

So he is picked up, again and again, for further crimes. And again and again he is turned loose on society — in the name of "rehabilitation."

No wonder the crime rate escalates! No wonder business firms and even home-owners are forced to spend huge sums on security measures that a few years ago were not even imagined! No wonder private patrols, electronic surveillance systems, and assorted types of burglar alarms are among our fastest-growing industries!

ATTORNEY GENERAL Younger made his remarks in support of Senate Bill 237 by state Sen. Fred W. Marler Jr., R-Redding. This bill, introduced at the request of the attorney general, would make prison sentences mandatory for all those convicted of selling heroin or of felonies involving the use of firearms.

Marler's bill would go a long way toward making our streets, homes and business places safe again. But it is only part of the answer.

Younger remarked that the bill would be embarrasing to "those who supported the state's probation subsidy law — which rewards a county financially for not sending a thug to prison." And there he hit at the heart of the matter.

The present law subsidizes crime. It does it by contributing to the cost of county probation services in proportion as a county keeps its criminals on the streets — by not sending them to prison.

This atrocious system should be abolished.

Convalescent Hospital Staff Worth Bouquet

Bouquets are recommended for Mrs. Smith, administrator, and her staff at the Fifth Avenue Convalescent Hospital.

My mother, Mrs. Eudora Codoni, has been hospitalized there for almost a year and needs maximum care.

I visit there any hour of the day or night and can only say what kindness and loving care is being given to her and the other patients.

The rooms, halls, and particularly the kitchen are consistently clean, attractively arranged and special decorations are planned for each holiday occasion.

I have been and am most appreciative of the entire staff.

Media Have Forfeited Much Public Trust

Media elements have created their own problem. Their hysterical caterwauling over freedom of the press has not touched the heartstrings of their long-suffering audience.

For a very good reason. The public does not trust the press, radio, and TV any more than it trusts the government, if as much.

Media flacks claim that press freedom is based on the "public's right to know". I certainly agree. However, I go further. I believe the public has the "right to know the truth".

Historically, and particularly in the recent past, the media has not given us the truth. We have now wised up to this fact. Honest mistakes in reporting and editorializing we can understand and accept. Important news withheld, important facts distorted, and stories fabricated from whole cloth are something else.

The public's news has been managed by an unfettered media. I admire the government's attempt to help the media do a better job. The media should try to help, too.

My critical view in general excludes certain media elements in particular. Your paper, specifically, is doing an excellent job and deserves much reader confidence.

What's Pretty About Corte Madera Marsh?

The article in tonight's I-J on the marsh plan threatening mice and birds is the product of the ridiculous reasoning of the hysterical environmentalists that abound in Marin.

The proposal puts forth the notion that if the marsh is developed the rats will leave. So who needs them? As far as the birds are concerned, there is still plenty of open space for them, with the network of county, state, and national parks within the county.

What is pretty about the Corte Madera marshland? Does it serve any purpose? Why not a park, golf course, and marina on this land? Let people enjoy the land, not mice that nobody enjoys.

How 'The FBI' Television Show Would Handle Watergate Case

WASHINGTON — As a big fan of the FBI television show, I am waiting with bated breath for them to dramatize the role the FBI played in the Watergate Bugging Case. The script should go something like this:

Opening shot of Watergate. Voice-over: "In the early hours of June 17, 1972, five men broke into Democratic National Committee headquarters at the Watergate while two accomplices waited nervously across the street in the Howard Johnson Motel. All seven were arrested. The next morning at 8:30 Special Agent Lewis Erskine (played by Efrem Zimbalist Jr.) is called in by his superior, Arthur Ward.

"ERSKINE, this is one of the toughest cases the FBI has ever had to work on. We have to find out who was behind the bugging of the Democratic National Committee headquarters at the Watergate. If these mad fiends are allowed to continue their wiretapping, it could destroy the United States of America forever."

"I'll get right on it."

"We can't leave a stone unturned in rooting out these vicious criminal rats who would do anything to sabotage one of the major political parties in the country. Do you understand?"

"We'll get them, sir."

ACT 2

Erskine and his assistant, Tom Colby, are questioning members of the Committee for Re-Election of the President. A man is sitting there taking notes.

"Who are you?" Erskine asks.

"I'm just sitting in to make sure they don't say anything that might reflect on the committee."

"Get out of here," Colby orders.

The man answers, "I have this letter from the White House which says I can be present whenever one of our people is interrogated."

Erskine reads the letter. It's signed by Dwight Chapin, the President's appointments secretary.

He turns to Colby. "Something is fishy here. We'd better talk to Chapin."

"What's Dean got to do with this?"

"He's in charge of the President's investigation of the Watergate bugging."

"Well, we'd better talk to Dean then."

"You can't talk to Dean unless you get permission from H. R. Haldeman, the President's special assistant."

"Then we'll talk to Haldeman."

ACT 3

Erskine reports to his superior, Arthur Ward: "We think we have very interesting information. The Watergate case was part of a larger plan by the Committee for Re-Election of the President to sabotage the Democrats. Hundreds of thousands of dollars in cash was raised by Maurice Stans, given to Hugh Sloan Jr., the treasurer, and dispensed through Herbert W. Kalmbach, the President's personal lawyer. The money was given to a Gordon Liddy and a Donald Segretti. The White House seems to be in this up to its ears."

"Good," says Ward. "Type up a copy of the report and send it to the White House immediately."

"But they're involved."

"Exactly! And for that reason they should know what we've got on them."

"But we've never given our files to people involved in a crime before."

"Erskine, you've got a good future with the bureau. Don't louse it up by getting the acting director mad at you."

"I have to worry about my image. I want to speak to the acting director about this personally."

"You can't, Erskine."

"Why not?"

Nixon's Man Connally Plays Confusing Role In Middle East

WASHINGTON. — Anyone who has the President of the United States writing his prospectus can count himself fortunate. For John B. Connally the prospectus, whether for high political office, as an envoy to friend and foe in distant lands, or, incidentally, as lawyer for large corporate oil interests, overflows with extravagant endorsements.

The sequence is wonderful to consider. First Connally becomes secretary of the treasury, the Democrat in the Nixon cabinet. He carries out the Nixon bulldozing operation in August, 1971, with the retreat from gold and the import surcharge. In December he rides herd on the Smithsonian monetary agreement which the President hailed as the greatest financial agreement in history.

That was only the start of the crescendo. In April, 1972, when Connally entertained the President and some 200 Texas tycoons at his Floresville ranch, Mr. Nixon said he had demonstrated "he can hold any job in the United States." In January it escalated so he can "handle any job I can think of in this country or in the world for that matter."

Then most recently came the press conference at which the President said that if he could prevail on Connally when he travels privately to take a semi-public mission he would be happy, since he could think of no better man to undertake it. This must be put together with repeated reports of high office in store for him. He was to come into the Nixon second term if not as secretary of state, then in an office created for him even more powerful. A little later, floated out of the White House by a process of slightly supernatural political levitation, was the report he was the President's choice for the Republican presidential nomination in 1976.

IT IS HARDLY surprising in light of all this that when Connally flew into Riyadh, the capital of Saudi Arabia, in mid-December, King Faisal and his ministers were a bit puzzled as to the Connally role. He had arrived in the company of the Occidental Petroleum Co. with Armand Hammer, chairman of Occidental.

Representatives of long-established American oil companies, notably Aramco, a consortium of Texaco, Exxon, Standard of California, and Mobil, are convinced Connally was underwriting the Hammer bid for a Saudi concession. Up for bidding is a concession in a zone adjacent to a big, new Aramco strike.

Occidental spokesmen have denied this, insisting that the Connally visit was a semi-official mission. In any event Connally was very busy during his two days in Riyadh. According to American official sources he represented Houston Natural Gas. The company was seeking a contract with Saudi Arabia for the joint exploitation of waste gases to produce methanol, a liquid fuel used in industry. Several weeks after Connally's visit the Saudi government signed a letter of commitment for $160 million for a joint venture.

Reports within the oil industry tell of large new retainers Connally has acquired. The law firm in Houston will not comment on these reports. The relationship between client and corporation is considered confidential.

ONE NEW CLIENT Connally is known to have acquired is Nelson Bunker Hunt, son of oil billionair H.L. Hunt. Connally is said to have agreed to serve as arbitrator between Hunt and the Libyan government on a concession that was half owned by British Petroleum until the Libyan dictator, Muammar el-Qaddafi, nationalized the British share. Libya now claims 50 per cent of the Hunt holding on a concession producing 500,000 barrels of oil a day. Hammer's principal Middle East oil operation is in Libya.

Libya is the tinder box of the Arab world. A fanatical Moslem, Qaddafi is said to finance the activities of Arab extremist groups including Black September. He welcomed the guerrillas who escaped from Munich after executing 11 Israeli participants in the Olympic Games.

With at least $2 billion and perhaps closer to $3 billion in cash in western banks, Qaddafi can well afford to pay the agents of violence. Observers saw his hand in the political turmoil in the Sudan and he has never disclaimed the executioners of the three diplomats shot in cold blood in Khartoum.

Libyan oil is vital to Western Europe, 80 per cent of West Germany's supply coming from there. Whether it is possible to come to terms with this fanatic and check the continuing encroachments on the western positions, it is impossible to say. Perhaps Connally is the man to do it. He is remarkably capable, forceful, supremely confident. But does he speak for the President or for his clients?

U. S. Not Ready to Chance The Elimination Of Fear

Down underneath all the present arguments about what President Nixon is, or isn't, doing to the New Deal, Fair Deal, and Great Society is one basic question about American society: Must it have a goad as well as a carrot to continue to be productige?

No one seriously challenges the fact that the American system as it has operated over the last century or so is one of the more productive achieved by mankind up to this time. There have been other highly productive systems. The British system was as productive during the heyday of the Industrial Revolution. The French were bursting upward just before the French Revolution. The German system was highly productive during the Bismarckian era. But the American has had a sustained phase of growth which, while not unique in kind, has been remarkable in volume and duration.

THE REWARDS (the carrot) built into the American system provided much of the stimulus. Some were due to the wealth of the natural resources which happened to lie inside the territory of the United States. But there has also been the goad of poverty driving from underneath and behind. The penalty for not working successfully and productively has always been near, and frightening. To this day poverty in the U.S. can mean living in squalor, misery — and hunger. In spite of all the programs to relieve the worst features of poverty, the U.S. still tolerates literal starvation. The goad exists.

The Nixon administration is entirely correct in asserting that much of the money intended to bring minimum food, warmth, and care to the poorest, sickest, and hungriest has been siphoned off along the way by those in less need. Only a trickle got through to those who needed it. All true. But the essential fact remains that the purpose of those programs was to put an end to extreme poverty in the U.S. Every American president from Franklin Roosevelt down to, and including Richard Nixon, has spoken out against allowing anyone in the U.S. to die of starvation. They all agree it should not happen.

If the programs now being cut back or abandoned had been successful, or were someday to operate as they should in theory — then there would no longer be the fear of helpless poverty operating from underneath the American system. And what would that do to the system? Could it survive in present form without a large pool of cheap labor driven by fear?

The people most eager to eliminate the programs are themselves driven by fear. They are afraid that ending fear of poverty will weaken the system. They also lament the new scarcity of fear-driven labor. Under these programs there has been a reluctance to accept the most menial jobs at lowest wages. There has been a scarcity of such labor.

AS THE PROGRAMS are cut back, there probably will be a revival of fear-driven labor. Fear itself is coming back, at the bottom.

Such fear has been eliminated from many modern countries which continue to be highly productive. Scandinavia, Switzerland, and the Netherlands are prime examples. It would seem that the U.S. is not yet ready to take a chance that what works elsewhere could also work here.

U.S. VOTER APATHY

Some Senators Gearing For Registration Reform

By RICHARD L. STROUT
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

WASHINGTON — Only 56 per cent of those eligible to vote in 1972 went to the polls, and now Congress may do something about it.

The United States stands as one of the few democratic nations, says a group of U.S. senators, that tolerate a passive role of government in registering voters. They argue for easier registration, supported by the government.

"Postcard registration" is their slogan. The Senate almost passed such a bill last year; this year it may succeed.

Republican Ted Stevens of Alaska and Democrat Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts lead the senators' drive for registration reform.

Some critics do not call it "reform," however; they argue that making it easier to vote only brings undesirable people to the polls.

Kennedy attacked this view at a recent Senate hearing. He agreed that voter apathy exits but offered evidence of registration obstacles, too.

Throughout the latter half of the 19th Century, before voter registration was instituted, voter turnout in presidential elections constantly ranged around 70 to 80 per cent and twice exceeded 80 per cent. But since 1900, records show, turnout has never reached 70 per cent. Eight times it has fallen below 60 per cent; twice below 50 per cent.

The Commission of Registration and Voting Participation called in 1963 for registration reforms to ensure that registration was accessible to all citizens. Very little has been done, however.

Americans pay their taxes by mail, it is noted, but they have to register in person.

In the 1972 presidential election there were 139 million persons eligible to vote but only 77 million (56 per cent) did. The other 62 million (44 per cent) stayed away.

While the U.S. got out only 56 per cent of those eligible to vote last November, recent elections in Britain show an equivalent ratio of 71 per cent; Canada, 74 per cent; France, 77 per cent; West Germany, 91 per cent.

A population survey by the U.S. Census Bureau two weeks after the November election indicated that of Americans who registered, the number who had voted was 87 per cent. Of the 62 million who stayed home, the vast majority were not registered. They could not have voted if they had wanted to. Only a small percentage of those who stayed home were registered.

Advocates of easier registration forecast extraordinary electoral changes if the U.S. adopts procedures like those in other democracies. The favorite example is Canada.

For more than 30 years Canada registration officials have prepared ad hoc voting lists before federal elections by making a door-to-door canvass in each election district.

Before the June 1968, election, for example, 81,000 Canadian officials registered 11 million citizens, or 98 per cent of those eligible.

The cost in Canada was about $7.5 million, or about 69 cents a voter. Canada thought it was worth it, and got out 74 per cent of all voters elgible to vote.

Equivalent registration in the United States would cost around $100 million. The registration senators think it's a modest cost to pay. Here's how Kennedy puts it: "Confronted by a gauntlet of arbitrary, unfair, and obsolete requirements, millions of potential voters fall by the wayside or refuse even to try."

The new proposal would establish a variety of types of federal grants available to state and local governments, paying up to 10 cents per eligible voter to defray registration costs, or up to 50 per cent the cost of the new programs.

The programs would be voluntary and administered by a bipartisan voter registration administration created in the Census Bureau, The bill carries a three-year, $135-million authorization.

A BETTER PROCESS? — Voter registration should be easier, critics on Capitol Hill say. In Boston, Mass., this mobile voting process has been used to some success. The turnout in last November's general election has prompted many senators in urging an overhaul in the nation's voting registration system.

Draft Evaders Don't Regret It

By TAKASHI OKA

STOCKHOLM — "America isn't all apple pie and mom," Desmond Carragher says. "It isn't a country that prepares people to leave and live elsewhere."

British by birth, American by citizenship, and about to become Swedish by choice, Des is one of those former American soldiers who chose exile in Sweden to service in Vietnam.

"We cannot provide forgiveness for them," President Nixon said in his recent press conference. If they wanted to return to the United States, they would have to pay the penalty. "Not a junket in the Peace Corps or something like that" but "a criminal penalty for disobeying the laws of the United States."

The exiles' response, judging from interviews here and in Malmo, is neither anger nor pleading but a kind of resigned indifference.

"I don't think anyone cares," says Terry Whitmore, a black from Memphis who was awarded the Purple Heart and the Bronze Star in Vietnam before going underground in Japan. He is studying to be a draftsman, at Swedish Goverment expense, is engaged to a Swedish girl, and is captain of an amateur basketball team, the Stockholm Stars, composed mostly of Americans — most of them blacks.

"We're not the criminals in this war," says George Meals, a recording engineer at the University of Stockholm. George came to Sweden from an Army camp in Georgia five years ago. He admits he occasionally misses his home city, Atlanta, and says he would "probably go back" if granted an unconditional amnesty. "But I don't think we committed any crimes, and I'm not going to crawl and beg."

There are, of course, political activists like Mike Powers, who thinks it is "unprincipled" even to think about amnesty at a time when permanent peace in Vietnam is far from assured. And there are drifters and misfits who seemed to be fleeing as much from themselves as from the war in Vietnam.

But if any common thread runs through the great variety of motives expressed by the approximately 500 American exiles who have come to Sweden, either as deserters or to escape the draft, it is perhaps best summed up in words of a black social worker who himself took refuge in this neutral northern land from his Amry unit in West Germany five years ago.

At the age of 11 he was taken to Oregon by his mother, along with his brother and sister. Des, like the other members of his family, accepted the American dream. He joined the Army, went to West Germany, attended noncommissioned officers school. There the dream began to crumble. All that he was taught — how to kill, how to resist brainwashing and torture in captivity — seemed dehumanizing. Sooner or later he knew he would end up in Vietnam.

It was 1968, and Sweden was becoming known as a place of refuge for Army deserters refusing Vietnam service. He was not a political radical; he didn't know enough about the arguments for or against the war to choose either side.

But "I knew I valued my own life," and going to Vietnam was "too important a step for me to make" when he lacked the ceratinty that it was the right thing to do. He thought matters through for two weeks and then decided to make his break. He has never looked back since.

George Meals was at a base hospital in Georgia when he came into contact with Vietnam War veterans who told him about My Lai-type incidents they had witnessed.

"The more I stayed in the Army the more I saw this wasn't gentleman's war in Vietnam," he comments dryly. A sympathetic company commander allowed him to apply for conscientious-objector status. After some weeks of waiting he heard through the headquarters grapevine that his application had been rejected in Washington. At this point, late in 1967, newspapers splashed the story of the "Intrepid four" — sailors on the aircraft carrier Intrepid who, after serving in Indochina waters, had deserted their ship in Japan and had been smuggled through the Soviet Union to Sweden, which had given them political refuge.

The news had a "terrific impact on me," George recalls. He applied for a passport, typed some leave papers for himself, and "split for Sweden."

Terry Whitmore was in the hospital in Japan after having been wounded in action in Vietnam and personally decorated by President Johnson at Cam Ranh when the story of the "Intrepid four" broke.

"Deserters?" he said to himself. "Them cats is cowards! I ain't no coward."

But he was not eager to return to Vietnam, and during his convalescence he met a Japanese girl who became his friend and who was bitterly anti-Vietnam war, as many young people in Japan were.

"That really shoked me," he says. "Here I'd been fighting for America thousands of miles from home, and then this thing happened, right in my home town."

His girl friend's brother discovered that the same Japanese organization that had smuggled the "Intrepid Four" out to Sweden could do the same for him. And so, after a flight to the northern island of Hokkaido and a take capture by a Soviet patrol boat, Terry, too, came to Sweden.

Terry enjoys the warmest of relations with his Swedish fiancee's parents, who run a dry-cleaning store. "We can get to the bottom of problems in discussing things with them," he says.

In fact, Terry feels, "It's easier for blacks to adjust to Swedish society than whites, simply because the white American has never accepted anyone to be his equal.

Other blacks, particularly in the southern port of Malmo across the strait from Copenhagen, disagree. Swedes are not racially liberal, asys Herb Washington. His Danish wife has been talked to by some of her friends for having married a black.

Among both whites and blacks, narcotics have been a problem — not merely marijuana or hashish, but heroin and "speed." Among 14 Americans in Swedish jails — 12 of them in Malmo — many have been charged with narcotics offenses.

The difficulties of learning a new language, the unfamiliar experience of being in a foreign land, the relative availability of drugs lead some exiles to feel they have no recourse except to drugs or psychiatric wards or both.

And yet, despite unfavorable newspaper publicity given to accounts of American deserters' crimes, Sweden, with its long tradition of neutrality and its "cradle-to-grave" welfare state, has been unusually generous in taking in American deserters and draft escapees and trying to help integrate them into the national community.

Unlike many other countries, where refugees are detained by the police while awaiting permission to stay, Sweden allows applicants rent and a weekly social-security benefit as soon as they have registered with the police. Once permission is granted, the would-be immigrant is given eight weeks' language training and additional vocation training at govenrment expense.

Eddie Smith, a black from New York, has his driver's license but must go through a chauffeur's school (at government expense) before he can obtain a taxi license. He hopes eventually to buy a taxi in partnership with a Swedish taxi driver he knows.

What of the future? Eddie thinks occasionally of Canada — it's closer to home and there is no language problem. Canada, in fact, is where the great majority of American deserters and draft escapees have gone.

The word from the United States, despite Nixon's harsh language, is that most deserters who really want to go back and face the music are let off with sentences of up to three years — or they are simply given a dishonorable dischanrge. Over the years, some 200 of the 700 Americans who fled to Sweden either from the Army or from the draft have done just that. Although there is a small group called Up for Exile that is working actively for amnesty, most of Americans now in Sweden seem more interested in building a new life for themselves, either in Sweden or elsewhere, than in going home permanently to the United States.

"Nationality is an accident of birth," says Des Carragher. "Exile lasts only as long as you think you're an exile. I quit being an exile long ago."

THREE-ALARM APPEALS

U.N. Agency Helping To Save Monuments

By ALINE MOSBY

PARIS (UPI) — The world's largest Buddhist temple is tilting. Venice is sinking. Peru's ruins must be tidied up for tourists.

Three-alarm appeals for help are pouring into the offices of the new rescue operation for saving mankind's monuments, the World Heritage Foundation started by the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO).

The foundation was approved at the UNESCO general conference in October after six years of passionate debate. But without waiting for the approval and the forthcoming ratification by member nations, rescue work has been forging onward for monuments dying from such ailments as earthquakes and water, pollution and dams.

Gerard Bolla of Switzerland, director of UNESCO's Department of Cultural Heritage, said ten of the most threatened monuments UNESCO is working on now are the Egyptian temples of Philae, the cities of Venice and Carthage, the Borobudur Buddhist temples in Java (Indonesia), the giant Buddah statue at Bamiyan in Afghanistan, the Bronze Age city of Mohenjo-Daro in Pakistan, the Hanoman Dhoka church and temples in Nepal, the rock cathedrals of Lalibela in Ethiopia, Inca ruins in Peru and Mongol ruins and ancient churches and mosques in Iran.

"At the request of a country we start a technical study of what has to be done to restore a monument," Bolla said, surrounded in his office by stacks of blueprints and reports.

"This is done with UNESCO or U.N. funds as our constitution calls for us to preserve the world's cultural heritage. Or sometimes private funds — the Borobudur studies were paid for by the Netherlands."

"The second stage is to find money to pay for the protection project — the United Nations, or other countries, foundations, institutions. The restoration of the 7th Century Lalibela cathedrals carved out of rock in Ethiopia is being done by the American National Monument Fund."

"The third stage is the actual work. We can help by sending experts such as civil engineers or chemists who specialize in stone preservation, or architects."

UNESCO is waiting for the Italian government to restore Venice with its own funds before it steps in to help make the city a culture center.

Meantime engineers in the Nile Valley of Egypt are flattening an island so they can transfer to it the Philae temples, submerged under water nine months out of 12 since the Aswan dam was built. This project, a continuation of UNESCO's first rescue job of saving the nearby Abu Simbel temples in the early '60's, will be partly paid for by Egypt. UNESCO has to raise $3 million but already has half — the proceeds of an exhibition of Egypt's King Tut treasures in London.

Bolla and his colleagues also are trying to dig up $5 million to help save the colossal 8th Century Borobudur temples in Java, called the largest and most significant monument in the southern hemisphere. Its leaning walls are in danger of collapse from old age and water seepage.

Bolla himself soon will fly to Pakistan to look into the engineering problems of saving the Mohenjo-Daro city of the Bronze Age, threatened by water from a new irrigation project.

Experts have finished an inventory of temples and churches of the Katmandu valley of Nepal and two experts are setting up a laboratory for stone and wood preservation there, Bolla said.

Polish experts are examining the ruins of the 850 B.C. city of Carthage, in danger of being overrun in Tunisia's population explosion.

Bolla said many developing nations have suddenly realized their monuments mean big business — tourism. Iran, in 1968, became the first country to sign an agreement to launch a large-scale tourist program with UNESCO aid, and Peru also has asked for help in restoration.

French and Italian architects have drawn up a program for Afghanistan that would preserve the 173-foot Buddah (said to be the world's largest statue) and temples at Bamiyan—and organize the entire area into a tourist site. Wind and rain have seriously eroded the cliff out of which the Buddha and smaller statues were built around the second century A.D.

"We have sent advisory missions to more than 30 countires," Bolla said, adding that UNESCO cannot get involved with some monuments — Ankor Wat in wartorn Cambodia, monuments on troubled Cyprus.

"We can't go into political situations," Bolla said.

This Week In The World

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

President Nixon, never on the best of terms with Congress, heated up a cross-town feud this week as he dared the Senate to take him to court.

The latest controversy involved John W. Dean III, White House counsel, whom the Senate Judiciary Committee wants to question in its hearings over whether L. Patrick Gray III should be named permanent director of the FBI.

Democrats have threatened to hold off on Gray's confirmation until Dean testifies. Nixon refused to allow Dean to visit Capitol Hill and in a news conference this week said Dean had "a double privilege, the lawyer-client relationship, as well as the presidential privilege."

"If the Senate feels that they want a court test, we would welcome it," Nixon said. "Perhaps this is the time to have the highest court of this land make a definitive decision with regard to this matter."

Sen. Sam. J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., who heads a subcommittee investigating the Watergate breakin, welcomed the challenge. He said he planned to subpoena Dean or other aides and if they refused to testify he would take them to court under a contempt citation.

However, Shultz did not say whether Russia is willing to ease its restictions on emigration of Soviet Jews a policy that has brought opposition in Congress to improved relations.

PARIS — Six members of the European Common Market decided to "float" their currencies in relation to the dollar. The money markets were closed during the week following the latest dollar crisis while governmental officials considered a solution.

PARIS — The Gaullist government was given five more years of power in France's second round of parliamentary elections.

Brazil Prohibits Discrimination, But . . .

By MARGARET ANDREWS

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — Racial segregation and overt forms of discrimination are officially prohibited in Brazil, a country with a polyglot racial mixture of Europeans, Indians and blacks.

American blacks visiting or living here know that, but...

"The whole Brazilian mythology was shattered for me about a week after I arrived here last year," says drama student Linda Thomas, 21, of Detroit.

"I brought an Afro wig from the States, and when I wore it shopping on Rua do Catete I was jeered at and openly taken as a tramp."

Joeritta Rhoda, 27, a native of Florence, S.C., who now teaches English at the Escola Americana in Rio, recalls her experience when she was moving boxes and books into her apartment on Rua Dias Ferreira, in the chic beachfront district of Leblon. The porter offered no help and motioned her toward the servant's entrance.

In the words of William Moore, 39, a native of New York and a free lance writer: "I am first introduced by friends as an American, then as William Moore. I don't know if it is just the prestige some Brazilians feel in knowing an American, or if it is an apology. You know — he may be black, but he's American."

If a Brazilian is asked if racial prejudice exists in his country, chances are he will indignantly deny it. An estimated one out of three Brazilians is either part African or mulatto.

"With blacks and whites doing samba on street corners, it is difficult to see through Brazilian racism," Miss Thomas said. "It is not easy to understand by American or European standards."

"When I tell Brazilians I am black, they react surprised and deny it," Miss Thomas said.

"Being a light skinned black seems to throw them off as if reminding them of something inside themselves which they don't care to admit.

"I remember once dating a Brazilian black who went to the point of saying that he 'liked' black people, he was not afraid of them, but when it came to marriage, it would only be with a white girl."

When Miss Rhoda arrived at the Rio airport, the porter carrying her bag asked what nationality she was. "I answered Afro-American," she said, "because I think it's more correct. He seemed puzzled, did a whole thing in his head, and then said, 'Well, I guess I'm Afro-Brazilian then.'"

If Brazilian blacks do not show the same racial pride as American blacks, by the same token they do not have the same complexes.

"There is very little blatant, petty discrimination and no bitterness like in the States," Moore said.

What he sees in Brazil is the superimposing of white culture — the billboards that reflect white standards of beauty, the avoidance of instruction in African art and heritage at the universities.

Many Brazilian blacks, and whites as well, are unable to identify as racism many things that would be considered as such in the United States. Commercial advertisements that perpetrate the caricature of Aunt Jemima and Black Sambo types draw no criticism in Brazil. The Amos 'n' Andy antics of Brazilian actor Grande Otelo provoke no offense.

The most pervasive form of discrimination is economic. It is mostly blacks who live in the favelas (shanty slums) that surround Rio de Janeiro. They man the shoeshine stands and fill menial jobs. The ruling government elite is all white.

In the annual Guanabara State beauty contests, the queen is more often than not a blue-eyed blonde.

"Many blacks here have accused me of seeing through colored glasses, but what they have here is economic glasses," Miss Rhoda said.

"You cannot say there is racism in Brazil. In the racially mixed society here, the discrimination that exists becomes more palpable and intellectually conceivable to Brazilians when put in terms of class division. They cover their guilt feelings with economics.

"But once the class system becomes less rigid, once education and employment level distinctions are removed between races, then Brazil will face the decision of where discrimination is based. Is it class or is it race?"

Moore says that because most blacks are poor, they do not reach competitive administrative and executive positions where discrimination is more evident. He says blacks in Brazil never created a subculture demanding trained black professional doctors and lawyers, as happened in the United States.

The most successful blacks are the same types that succeeded in the United States — musicians and athletes.

But Moore notes the American experience is making itself felt.

"I do not know whether it is love of America or what, but I have noticed a change during my frequent trips in the last few years. Already Afro hair styles are accepted. And though it may only be done in imitation, blacks will eventually realize that it is natural and beautiful. I wonder if it will lead to a true awareness. I hope it will. It has to."

Profile Of A Southern Sonoman —

Larry Higgins Finds Positions As Police Chief, Church Bishop Equally Satisfying

LARRY D. HIGGINS is one of the few men in California who can make an arrest, as a law enforcement officer, or perform a wedding ceremony, as a churchman. He became Petaluma's chief of police Jan. 1, 1968. And last May he took on added responsibilities as a Mormon Church bishop.

(Independent-Journal photo)

By BONNIE BARD

Petaluma Police Chief Larry D. Higgins puts away his badge and gun on Sundays to take on his other role as a Mormon bishop.

The combination might be less unusual in Utah or Idaho, but Higgins is one of very few chiefs in California to lead such a double life.

"I'm one of the few police chiefs in the state who can say they also can afficiate at marriage ceremonies," Higgins said. "Some of the couples I marry think its really unique."

Law enforcement and the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints have both been important to Higgins all his life.

"It seems if I'm not doing things for the city, I'm doing things for the church," he said, adding that the jobs are equally rewarding.

HIGGINS WAS born and reared in Idaho and moved to Utah to take his first job as assistant manager at an F. W. Woolworth store.

"I was fresh out of school and doing things like decorating windows," he said. "One day I asked myself, 'What am I doing in here?' So I joined the army."

The Army brought Higgins to Sonoma County where he was stationed at the former Two Rock Ranch Army Station west of Petaluma. He had been introduced to law enforcement earlier by a neighbor with the Utah Highway Patrol, so an assignment in the Military Police was welcomed.

WHEN HIS TOUR duty was over in 1960, he decided to stay in the area and joined the Petaluma Department as a patrolman.

Higgins worked his way up to a sergeant's position several years later, and on Jan. 1, 1968, was jumped all the way to police chief. "It was quite a transition — from sergeant to chief," he said.

Higgins took on the duties as bishop of Petaluma's Second Ward last May and saw his calendar become even more crowded.

"It takes a great deal of time," he said. "I'm at the church nearly every night and, of course, all day on Sundays."

BEFORE HIS appointment, Higgins had served on the Stake High Council of the church. "I've been deeply involved in the church for many years," he said.

"I make sure we have one night a week at home for 'family night'," Higgins said.

He and his wife, Kaleen, and children Cindy, 14, Nate, 11, and David, 7, gather to share experiences and problems, read the Gospel, play games and discuss family matters such as goals, finances and vacation plans.

"The church encourages us to be closer as a family," Higgins said. "There has been a big breakdown in the family home. Parents have to show they care."

HIGGINS SEES the weakening of family relationships as the cause of many police problems. "We keep making more arrests, but crime is still on the rise," he said.

The chief labled burglary as Petaluma's major crime problem. He hopes a $34,000 grant application to the California Council on Criminal Justice will be approved, to provide a full-time crime prevention specialist to help reverse the trend of more and more break-ins.

He said the specialist would expand the home alert program and show residents how to make their homes more burglary-proof. "We also hope to set up home protection units whereby sections of householders in 10 homes will watch out for each other," he said.

"POLICE WORK is really getting specialized," Higgins said. "When I joined the force in 1960 they handed me a badge and told me to go out and enforce the law."

"A guy must be pretty much on his toes to make good arrests and to make them stick," he added. "He must know his law."

Higgins has seen dramatic changes in law enforcement in his 13 years in uniform. "It's done a complete flip-flop. We have very different approaches than before," he said.

"Offices are more highly educated," Higgins continued. "Recruits learn in school now. They no longer practice on John Q. Citizen."

HIGGINS, WHO has attended Santa Rosa Junior College when his schedule permits, en "Officers as many of his officers as possible to go to school. The department sends three officers to the full-time police academy there every semester.

"The City Council has been very good to me in approving the programs I wanted to try out," he said. Some of the most successful include the "ride-along" program which permits residents to spend four hours riding patrol with an officer.

"It's one of our better programs," the chief said. "Citizens can ride with an officer and see what he's confronted with — what he has to put up with."

HIGGINS IS also pleased with the success of a program to reduce bicycle thefts. After an intensive campaign to get persons to license their bicycles and engrave serial numbers on them, thefts decreased markedly.

In the past five years Higgins has found himself tied more and more to his desk and paperwork. "I miss patrol sometimes — I miss the action, but I do get involved in some cases," he said.

Words like satisfying, challenging, important and gratifying are all regular parts of Higgin's vocabulary regardless of whether he is discussing either of his jobs — police chief or Mormon bishop.

Bettyjo Norton — An Artist Inspired By Visit To Ireland

Marin Painter Puts On Canvas Her Impressions Of The Isle

By DON KEOWN

Like so many American travelers to Ireland, Bettyjo Norton of Larkspur brought back with her from a 1972 trip memories of an emerald countryside, softly-lighted woods, meandering stone fences and a friendly, full-of-character people.

But Mrs. Norton, an artist, returned with more than recollections. She brought home with her from Ireland as well the inspiration for a series of impressionistic landscapes that she calls her Cathedral Series.

Now totalling 25 Irish scenes all done in oils, the series is continuing.

WORKING FROM sketches done and slides taken while overseas, she says: "I guess I will just continue with them until I run out of inspiration. Then, I'll be ready to return to Ireland to recharge my batteries."

This St. Patrick's Day she will part with one of her Cathedral Series paintings.

"An Irish Spring" will be one of many paintings and sketches offered for sale this evening, 7 to 11 o'clock, as the Terra Linda Art Assn. holds its annual Irish Coffee Art Auction in the Marin Veterans Memorial Building, Civic Center, San Rafael, with KSFO's Al Newman as auctioneer.

THE IRISH COFFEE Auction, in its 10th year and well established as a Marin tradition on St. Patrick's Day, is the major fund-raising project of the Terra Linda Art Assn. in support of its gallery at 4172 Redwood Highway, San Rafael.

The Bettyjo Norton painting to be sold tonight represents a part of her memories of an April, 1972, trip in which she and her husband, William B. Norton, designer and sculptor, spent three weeks on the Old Sod and in Europe.

In Ireland, they visited fine old mansions and ruined castles, toured Dublin, strolled through quiet villages, roamed the lushly green fields — 'usually in the rain."

BUT WHAT MRS. Norton remembers best is the soft Irish light peering through the trees of woods and forests — "unlike any light I have ever seen anywhere else — so much softer."

The experience, she admits, "turned my thinking and my painting completely around. When I returned home, I found myself painting landscapes, whereas in the past I had done mainly figures and stills."

But the softness of that Irish light also caused Bettyjo Norton to shun a realistic approach to her canvases, and to adopt an impressionistic style for her Irish-inspired series.

"THUS THE WALLS, the trees, the grass, the roads are never there in sharp detail," she explains. "I just try to create an impression of them — the impression thay made upon me when I stood before them.

AT LEFT, the brush that is just beginning a painting on a canvas is clasped in the hand of Mrs. William . (Bettyjo) Norton, Larkspur artist, working in her studo at her home at 117 Sycamore Ave. Well known for her versatility as an artist, Mrs. Norton has been concentrating the past year upon a series of landscape paintings that she calls her Cathedral Series, inspired by a spring, 1972, trip to Ireland and Europe. Done in impressionistic style, they represent her recollections of the soft outdoor lighting and the lush emerald green setting of Ireland. And one of her paintings from the series will be an appropriate including tonight as the Terra Linda Art Assn. holds its traditional St. Patrick's Day Irish Coffee Art Auction at the Marin Veterans Memorial Building, Civic Center, San Rafael. The Norton painting to be offered for sale is entitled "An Irish Spring." Below, Mrs. Norton works upon one of the paintings in an intermediate stage, striving for the effect of the sun peering through the misty air and through the branches of the trees of an Irish forest. It is her most lasting impression of the Ireland to which she is anxious to return for more sketches and more inspiration.

An Irish Painting For Saint Patrick's Day

Art Auction Contribution By Bettyjo Norton Is Appropriate

And if there is a castle or an abbey or a cottage in a scene, it is just barely indicated, not painted in detail. Actually, buildings aren't my thing."

Mrs. Norton is a native Californian, and a graduate of the College of Marin who has studied at the School of Fine Art in San Francisco, the College of Arts and Crafts in Oakland, and with private teachers.

In addition to the Terra Linda Art Assn., she is a member of the Marin Society of Artists, the Genesis Gallery, and other art organizations.

A biography of Bettyjo Norton has noted: "A typical 'BJ' work is an atypical painting. Never content with traditional approaches, she has formulated many unique techniques."

Thus, in 1965 when she was the subject of an earlier story in the Independent-Journal Marin Magazine, it dealth with the collages that she was then fashrioning in her kitchen from brown wrapping paper and plastic binder.

COVER PHOTO

BETTYJO NORTON of Larkspur has moved her easel and canvas outdoors into her garden as she works upon one of her Irish-inspired Cathedral Series paintings. She works from sketches she drew and slides she took while in Ireland in the spring of 1972 as she attempts to capture with her paints the seemingly endless array of colors of the Irish countryside. The mist-softened light of Ireland, she finds, lends itself particularly well to the impressionistic style that she has adopted for the current series of oil paintings.

An Art Series Of Irish Scenes

thodox materials, but in unusual and often changing ways.

Right now she is filled with memories of the trip of a year ago, and spurred by the desire to get down on canvas her impressions of rural Ireland.

"It was the prettiest country I have ever seen," she enthuses, "with fantastic colors. In one day — almost in one setting — you could see everything in the way of colors."

BEFORE HER marriage, Mrs. Norton was Bettjo Hilman. "That's an English, not an Irish, name," she says. "But I am part Irish. My grandfather kissed the blarney stone. And I guess our trip brought out the Irish in me."

Once her present streak of creativity runs out, Mrs. Norton would like to return to Ireland with more time, so that she could do paintings in the field and on the scene.

Some of her Cathedral Series paintings have been sold. Another will go tonight at the Irish Coffee Auction.

BUT IN HER studio as she works Mrs. Norton still has around her enough of the paintings to keep alive and fresh for her the memories of a land where the pace of life is such "that driving is a pleasure, not a chore," where she encountered the brightest greens she has ever seen anywhere, and where, in contrast, she also came across the softest of lighting, peering mysteriously through the Irish mists.

A SKETCH SHE DREW to help her keep in mind the beauty of the Irish countryside that so impressed her during her 1972 visit is studied by Bettyjo Norton before she proceeds with another painting in her Cathedral Series. Some completed Irish landscapes, painted in the impressionistic style, can be seen behind her. One such canvas will be sold at tonight's Irish Coffee Art Auction at the Marin Veterans Memorial Building.

Marin Living

Design, Decor To Fit A Site

Village West in Fairfax qualifies as a Marin County showplace in two respects, its builder, Gentry Development Co., believes.

Its design and construction, Cam Ninekirk, Gentry's vice president and marketing director, asserts, reflects the current ecological awareness, leaving the rural atmosphere of the area on Fairfax's western edge undisturbed.

"We built along both sides of a lovely meandering stream, taking great care to retain mature trees and growth," Ninekirk says. "And we added more landscaping."

AND THE INDOOR decor for model units of the small townhouse community, he adds, shows taste and the flexibility required when the decorators are working without the assistance of occupants who can be contacted and consulted as to their needs and preferences.

Responsible for the indoor decor are Mrs. Gordon Wright and Mrs. Robert Hayes of Marin County's Bella Vista Decorators, specializing in private commissions. Village West represented their first model home complex assignment, although they have since done several more.

Of the job, Mrs. Wright says: "The townhouse market covers a much broader spectrum of people than is usually found in the single family home market. Therefore, we had to come up with something that would appeal to and be functional for people of diverse personalities and with diverse requirements.

"WHAT JACKIE and I tried to do in each model was to reflect the different life styles of their most probable occupants. Thus, there is the young, growing family, the professional couple, the family whose children have grown and who may no longer need as much space as they once did, and a surprising number of singles, all of whom must be accommodated.

"And you can't spend a for-

VILLAGE WEST is a fewer than 100 townhouse units community on the western edge of Fairfax, built along both sides of a meandering stream in the midst of mature shade trees that were carefully preserved. Environmental factors were given a high priority in the site location of the townhouses and in their design, according to Cam Ninekirk, who is vice president and marketing director of the Gentry Development Co., the developer. Protection and upkeep of the landscaping is to be guaranteed permanently by a home owners' association, the funds coming from monthly dues to be paid by home owners. (Photos by Karl H. Riek)

Village West Decor: Taste, Flexibility

tune doing it, because people relate to a prospective new home today on a very practical level."

At the same time, she adds, a sizable segment of townhouse buyers, "those who can afford more expensive homes, but who like the concept of maintenance-free living with all the financial and tax advantages of home ownership," cannot be ignored.

THESE ARE THE people who prefer to spend the difference in investment between a townhouse and a larger residence on a favorite recreation such as a boat or travel, or a place at Tahoe.

To attract this market, the furnishings of the model must meet their standards even as it remains within the means of the somewhat less affluent.

Finally, Mrs. Wright says, in the decorating of the Village West models, suitability to the community's environment had to be accorded consideration, just as it was in the exterior design and the site location.

MRS. WRIGHT states the basic objective in decorating for builders: "To make the model homes stand out in a believable way from the dozens of other models at which prospective buyers most certainly will also be looking and considering."

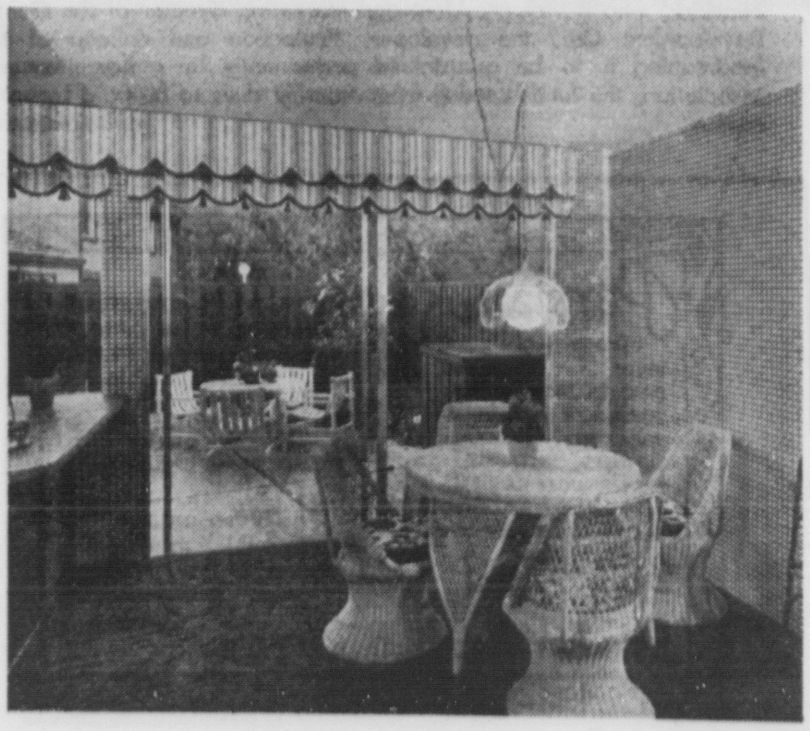
THE DECOR IN this model unit at Village West by Bella Vista Decorators demonstrates how householders on a budget can, with a little weekend work, provide a charming dining area plus display space for hobby collections in their own homes. Rough sawn beams and shelves are inexpensive. The dining table was bought at a flea market at a reasonable price. And a few hours with sandpaper and furniture finish was all that was needed to convert it to a "family heirloom."



ABOVE, Bella Vista Decorators kept the diverse elements simple and the styling mixed in this two-bedroom Village West home. Although the contemporary chrome reading lamp at right was fairly expensie, the cowhide on the wall was not. The decorators planned for an on-the-go couple or a single man or woman with little time for extra housework —hence the easily maintained, long lasting materials. At left, the dining set was purchased new, but a lot of serviceable used wicker furniture can be found. A few cans of spray paint, some bright cushions and you have a light, cheerful dining or breakfast room. The light airiness of wicker makes it especially well suited to relatively small spaces, and it is a great natural complement to the outdoors.

FOR THE family inrlined to a more formal way of life and perhaps more accustomed to a larger home, the adjustment to townhouse living is made easier in this Village West model at Fairfax by placing the dining room and living room groups in such a way that they do not encroach upon or crowd the other. There is an overall feeling of openness that is due in part to making the patio seem an extension of the living room. Indeed, in pleasant weather it serves as just that.

Ecology On The School Grounds

There's nothing particularly new anymore about an environmental conference.

Gatherings on ecological matters have become almost commonplace in recent years.

Still, the conference to be held next week, Friday and Saturday, at the San Domenico School on Butterfield Road in San Anselmo's Sleepy Hollow district rates as "something different."

For one thing, it is planned specifically for young people, their teachers and their parents.

Then, too, without leaving the

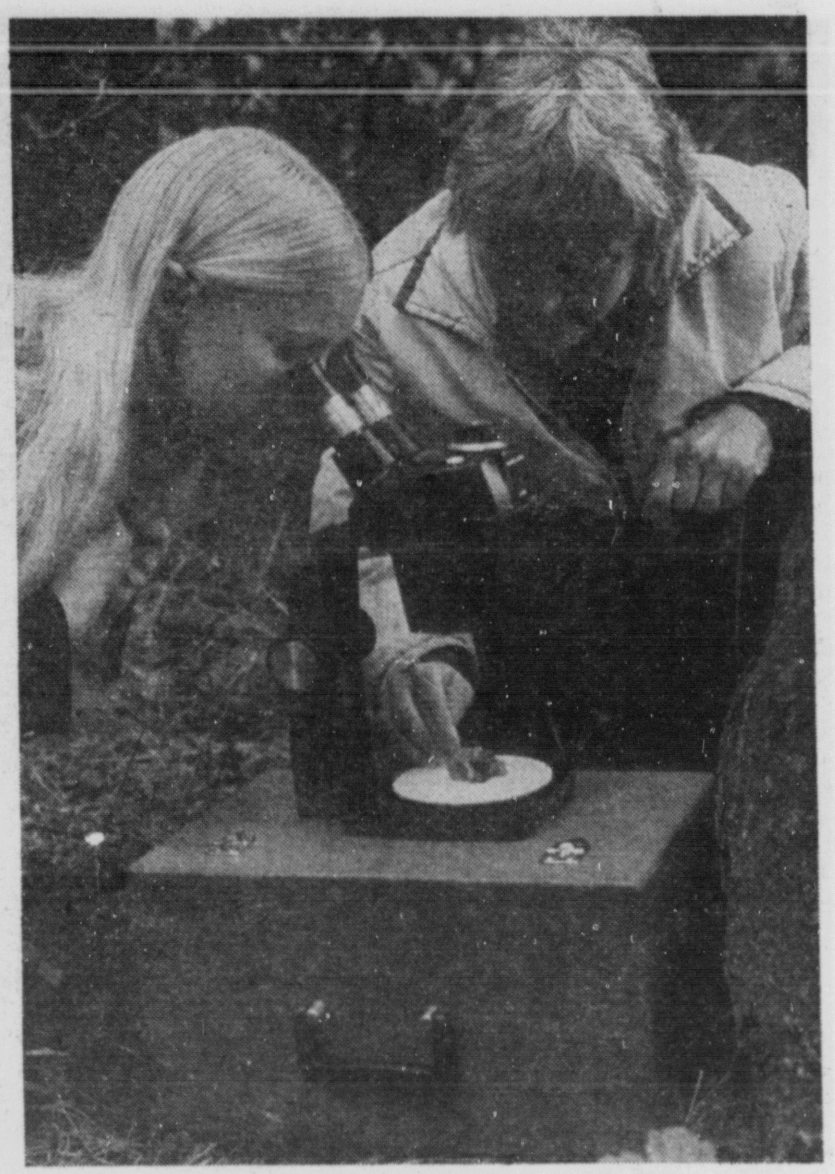
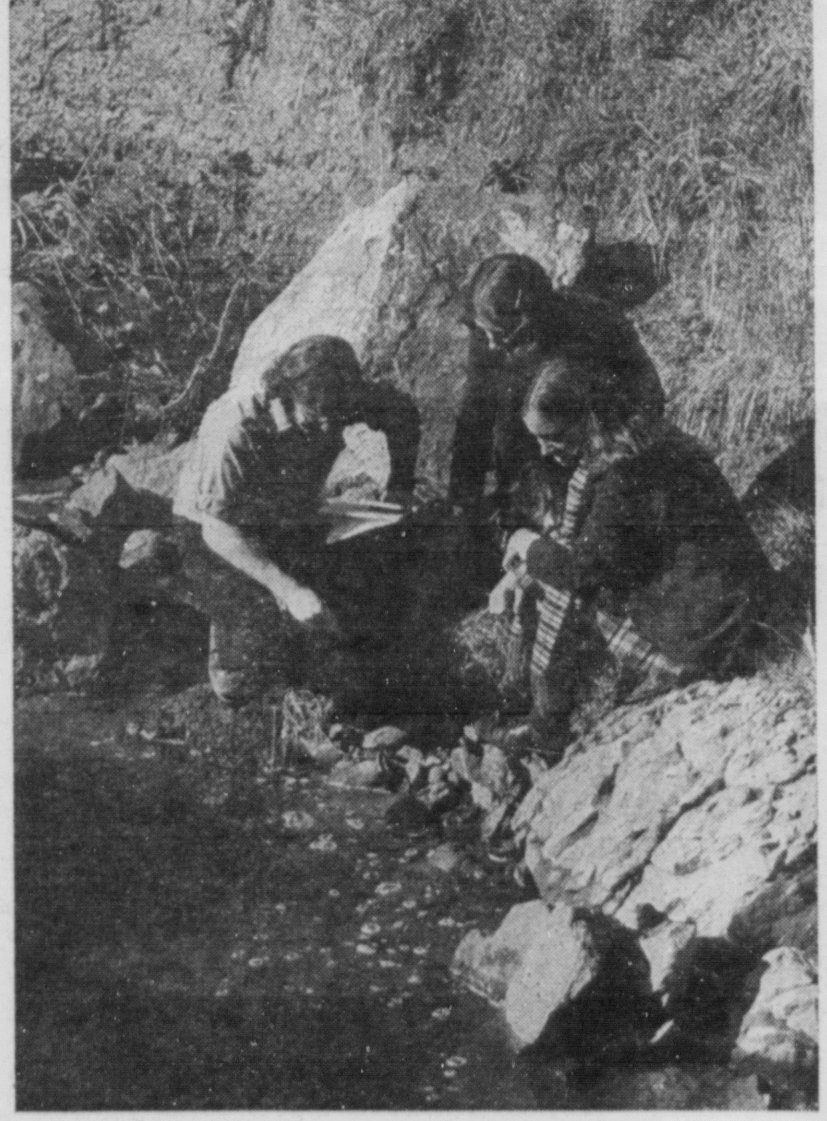
THE FORTUNATE girls at San Domenico School do not have to wander far from their classrooms for a first-hand view of some of nature's wonders. San Domenico students, left to right, Lynn Cresalia and Patsy Clifford, both of San Rafael, and Sarah Keeley of Colusa listen to an explanation from Mrs. Rembert B. Kingsley of Ross, naturalist, of the vital role played by decomposers in returning nutrients to the soil, even as they make their own observations. Next weekend, others can enjoy the same experience under the guidance of Mrs. Kingsley, assisted by Forum of Environmental Quality staff members, as San Domenico hosts a two-day environmental conference for students, teachers, parents and the public.



THE LENS OF the powerful microscope being used by Sarah Keeley under the watchful eyes of Mrs. Rembert B. Kingsley gives the San Domenico School girl a different perspective of what Witches Butter, a fruiting body of the fungus that decomposes rotting logs, really looks like. Under the microscope, the material takes on the appearance of an exotic flower. The scene is the spacious San Domenico campus in Sleepy Hollow, which is in itself one huge outdoor laboratory for the instruction of young naturalists.



INSECT LIFE often thrives virtually unnoticed in rich variety along the edges of a stream, San Domenico School biology teacher Kevin Howe points out to his students Jo Edwards and Wanden Treanor. And although often minute in size, these tiny insects have an essential role in nature's grand scheme of things. Henceforth, whenever the students encounter such a stream, it will be with a new awareness of the life that is teeming along its fringes, and of the importance that life plays in the maintaining of the delicate overall balance of nature.

TREES, PLANTS and animal life all play a part in the environment around San Domenico School, Mrs. Rembert Kingsley demonstrated to biology students Lynn Cresalia, Patsy Clifford and Sarah Keeley. Whether man's impact is constructive or destructive depends upon him, she adds. And that is the point of next week's environmental conference at San Domenico.

A MAGNIFYING GLASS is put to use by student Lynn Cresalia so that she can obtain a closer view of the spore-producing stalks of mosses that grow on the trunks of trees on the San Domenico School campus. While she does so, naturalist Mrs. Rembert Kingsley provides an expert explanation of the highly complicated life cycle of these seemingly simple plants.

San Domenico Is Nature Laboratory

San Domenico School grounds, the participants will have at their feet quite literally an outdoor laboratory where nature can be observed close-up in all its intricacies and mysteries.

THE PROGRAM, beginning Friday at 10 a.m., includes on its program a number of field trips over the rustic campus, to be conducted by staunch Marin County naturalist and conservationist Mrs. Rembert B. Kingsley and a Forum for Environmental Quality team. Mrs. Kingsley is a visiting lecturer at California State University at San Francisco.

In addition to the field trips both days, the program for the environmental get-together includes:

A TALK BY Robert Gros, Pacific Gas and Electric Co. vice president, on whether man and his environment can come to terms.

An address by State Sen. Peter Behr entitled "Water — Filling California's Bathtub." And also on the Saturday program, a talk by William D. Evers, chairman of the Bay Conservation and Development Commission, "The Case for a Comprehensive Regional Environmental Agency."

Prof. Joel Gustafson will speak on "The Mud Flat-Salt Marsh Habitat." And Richard O'Connell, director of the enforcement division of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's western district will conclude the conference with a talk, "Environmental Clean-Up — the Crunch Is On."

DURING THE two days, there will also be a paper recycling slide presentation, a showing of Elizabeth Terwilliger films and other displays and events.

And underlining what is being said and shown will be the things the participants will see for themselves with the help of expert observers as they walk the Rip Van Winkle-type environment in which the San Domenico School is set.

Students in all public and private schools in Marin, grades six through 10, have been invited to attend. So have their teachers, who may enroll for a full unit of college biology credit under the auspices of Dominican College. Parents and interested persons from the community have also been invited.

LYNN CRESALIA listens to Mrs. Rembert Kingsley's explanation of the biological role of the lichen that they have found growing among the mosses on the fine old trees that thrive on the San Domenico School campus in Sleepy Hollow.

THE GROWTH OF a redwood seedling is a long and tedious process, biology instructor Kevin Howe explains to San Domenico School students Jo Edwards and Jennifer Gobershock, making the mighty trees all the more precious to mankind when they survive to achieve maturity. The botanical life on the San Domenico grounds to be studied next Friday and Saturday by participants in the environmental conference range from the tiniest growths to the mightiest trees. And behind them all are interesting stories.

KEVIN HOWE points out to some of his students the interesting contrast in vegetation growing on the north and south slopes of the hillsides on the eastern side of the San Domenico campus. Students, teachers and parents will be trekking these slopes during next week's two-day environmental conference.

Highly Literate Essays

HIDE AND SEEK By Jessamyn West; Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, 310 pages, $7.50. Reviewed by Alice Dalbey.

"Solitude has always excited me," writes Jessamyn West.

Whether you agree, or whether you belong to the togetherness crowd, you may be intrigued by these highly literate essays.

Jessamyn West McPherson, novelist best known for "The Friendly Persuasion," Quaker connection of the Nixon-Milhous clan, wife of a rancher, resident of St. Helena, investigates her personal urge toward loneliness and, in so doing, tells us what it was to be young in early 20th Century California.

She interweaves incidents from her youth in Yorba City with the happenings, thoughts, fears and reflections that were here during a recent solitary sojourn in a trailer parked on the banks of the Colorado River.

The autobiographical sketches are entertaining. She shows us the West family, complete with camping gear, reversing the Santa Fe Trail in an open touring car to visit "back home family" in Southern Indiana. She describes "being in love" — a harmless, though bemusing state that will strike chords in the hearts of all women (over 40?) brought up with the admonition, "don't be forward." And her carefully objective portrait of her vivacious, creative mother is a loving tribute.

But Jessamy West's contemporary reflections speak primarily to the condition of women. In our society, culture and custom conspire to force women into company — the demands of parents, brothers, husbands, children, fall on the female.

To some women this is constant fulfillment and pleasure; to others it is frequently duty and burden. Jessamyn West has useful philosophical thoughts — plus spine-stiffening practical suggestions — for coping with these responsibilities.

This is a slow-moving, thoughtful book that should be required reading for men whose lives are cumbered with independent, would-be-solitary women.

Women who find that their worlds often are too much with them will read this book with intense interest.

The Private And Public Lives Of Prima Donnas

DIVAS by Winthrop Sargeant; Coward, McCann and Geoghegan, 192 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Jim Williams.

Nothing really profound leaps from the pages of "Divas," but it is a neat little book for any opera buff.

While you may not agree with Winthrop Sargeant's selections of superstars of the operatic stage, his six picks do rank well up among today's greatest vocal lights.

Each of the profiles, with one exception, has appeared in The New Yorker in slightly different form. It's a nice gesture on Sargeant's part to assemble them under one cover for the library shelf.

In order: Joan Sutherland, Marilyn Horne, Beverly Sills, Birgit Nilsson, Leontyne Price and Eileen Farrell. Each of the profiles tells the private and public side of these "prima donnas" with sketches of their careers, families, thoughts and hopes.

The reader will find Miss Price still uneasy after all her many successful years of being a Southern black girl who climbed into the international operatic ring.

And then there's the warm and personal glow of Miss Farrell, who is just as happy shopping in a supermarket as she is on the operatic and concert stages of the world.

Also the reader gets to share Miss Sills' concern of her children, one deaf, the other retarded.

Miss Sutherland, who sometimes appears rather stuffy on stage, comes across as a very warm, but shy individual who is not impressed with the glitter surrounding her exalted station.

The portrait of Miss Nilsson is very interesting. She is just as happy being a housewife and doesn't like the expression "prima donna." She once said, "I feel more like a working soprano."

Finally, a spirited picture of Miss Horne. While only 38, she has climbed the scales of international stardom. She admits to being extremely ambitious to set new records as a singer. And one of her idols is Joan Sutherland, with whom she shares honors in this book.

All these singers have graced the San Francisco opera and concert stages. For Miss Price, the San Francisco Opera Company helped launch her on her remarkable career. And all have received and deserved plaudits from the Bay Area's audiences and critics.

Aside from the tightly written essays, each "diva" is captured pictorically — both in private and public life.

Scarfaced Charley's Warriors In Dungaree

BURNT-OUT FIRES by Richard Dillon; Prentice-Hall, 351 pages, $8.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

The Modoc Indian War of 1872-3 has been less glamorized in print than many such engagements. The reason is not hard to find.

It is a little difficult to make "big medicine" for excitement-hungry readers out of a band of Indians whose leaders bore such names as Captain Jack, Scarfaced Charley, Hooker Jim, and Shacknasty Frank — and on top of that fought their war clad in blue dungarees and cotton shirts instead of buckskins and feathers.

There is still another reason. The principal battles of the Modoc War had no cavalry charging to bugles. They were trench warfare — although the Modoc Lava Beds offered a natural defense system surpassing the best that Poilus, Tommies, doughboys and Bosche were able to dig in the fields of France in World War I.

The Indians called the lava beds "the place of burnt-out fires," and it is from this that Mill Valley's Richard Dillon has drawn the title for his history of the war: "Burnt-Out Fires." It is a symbolic title, too, for the tribal fires of the Modocs were burned out in the struggle.

In his introduction, Dillon says the Modoc War resembled "a Tennesse mountain feud crossed with a Greek tragedy," also that it was all our Indian wars rolled into one. Both descriptions are apt.

It had, too, drama enough for all. Probably nowhere in history can be found another heroine with such fierce loyalty to both her native and her adopted people as Toby Riddle, the Modoc wife of a white man — nor one with greater courage. And — eloquence and rhetoric aside — probably no military commander stood taller in battle victory than Scarfaced Charley when, after he and 22 of his braves had all but annihilated 66 regular Army soldiers and 27 Indian scouts in a classic ambush at Hardin Butte, he called off his troops and shouted to the fear-crazed survivors: "All you fellows that ain't dead yet had better go home. We don't want to kill you all in one day."

There was, of course, more to the Modoc War than the fighting. The events leading up to it were a local variation of the oft-repeated story of the encroachment of land-hungry white civilization on the land that was truly sacred to the Indians.

Dillon traces the antecedents at length — such length, in fact, that, like the Fort Klamath soliders, the reader is likely to become a little impatient for the war to start. But it is this careful backgrounding that gives the tale perspective and dimension as it progresses.

Every writer has some failing, and Dillon's is in his descriptions of action. The drama is there, but the battles lack excitement. He has never quite grasped the advice that O. Henry once gave to a novice seeking the clue to how to write a story. "Don't say your old woman came into the room and howled," said O. Henry. "Bring her into the room and make her howl."

"I had been amazed by the difference in time of nightfall between the Highlands and the South of England. In mid-summer it was easily possible to read a newspaper outside at midnight and on such evenings we lost all sense of time. . .Yet despite the novelty of those evenings and the calm of the sea when it was possible to overhear a conversation on Kyleakin pier a mile away, the dark autumn evenings also held special pleasures of their own: a roaring fire and the scent of sap sizzling from the ends of pine logs; the wind moaning round the buildings; the warmth and sense of security." John Lister-Kaye in "The White Island."

Gavin Maxwell's Isle

By DON KEOWN

With the publication of his "Ring of Bright Water," Britain's Gavin Maxwell became one of the great names in the field of nature and animal conservation writing.

Small wonder then that young John Lister-Kaye gleefully abandoned his job in industrial Wales to accept Maxwell's invitation to join him on his remote island in the Hebrides off Scotland's western coast for a double-barreled project.

The two naturalists were to collaborate on a book on mammals of encyclopedic scope. And they were also to work together in converting Kyleakin Island into a private zoo or sanctuary for Western Highland birds and animals.

Maxwell had moved to Kyleakin after fire had destroyed his beloved Camusfearna, scene of "Ring of Bright Water," taking with him Teko, the elderly and lone survivor of the otters made famous in his book.

Neither the new book nor zoo was to get beyond the preliminary stages.

By the time Lister-Kaye reached Kyleakin, Maxwell was already in a hospital in Inverness, gravely ill. He never left that hospital, dying there Sept. 4, 1970, to the loss of all nature-lovers and of nature itself.

"I have met few people in my life whose enthusiasm for living matched even one-third of Gavin's," writes Lister-kaye of his friend. "In him it knew no bounds. It was not, as with most people, a flame that occasionally flared up or that required a particular medium in which to flourish; it was perpetually burning. Furthermore, it was as infectious as it was buoyant. . ."

Ironically this wise and good man, for all his love for life, persisted foolishly in an 80-cigarettes-per-day smoking habit —and died, predictably, and bravely, but tragically prematurely, of lung cancer.

Lister-Kaye returned to the island and remained through a stormy, fascinating winter. But the book, he knew, was beyond his capabilities, without Maxwell's help, and he turned the notes he had accumulated over to a fellow naturalist. The zoo still seemed a possibility, and its foundations were laid. But, it developed, the Maxwell business enterprises were too shaky to support the project, and it, too, had to be abandoned, the animals and birds being released to the wilds or placed in new homes.

John Lister-Kaye's experience, however, was not wasted. He has written in "The White Island" a delightful account of the aborted Kyleakin program. While it is hardly another "Ring of Bright Water," it is a refreshing story that involves some of the same characters as the Maxwell book, and is permeated with the same joyful feeling for life.

There is less description of Lister-Kaye's observances of and discoveries about animal and bird life than one might hope — sections such as his fascinating experiments to discover why gulls are white. Some conservationists will be disturbed by his defense of hunting — on the grounds that it is less cruel than trapping and poisoning but without any real consideration of the central question of whether man has any right to assume the role of exterminator regardless of the method — and by his adoption, at least in part, of the Highlander's traditional prejudice for and hatred against the fox.

But for the most part, "The White Island" is, for its reader, a series of pleasant, eye-opening, heart-warming experiences, offering insight into a quiet, close-to-nature existence that most of us never have the opportunity to enjoy for ourselves. The calm solitude of the islands and their imprint upon the people and other living things are recreated with remarkable clarity and with a magnetic appeal.

"No one would suggest that life on a Hebridean island is all harmony and delight, an endless round of balmy days and spectacular sunsets couched in the deceptive tranquility of a few high summer days," Lister-Kaye writes. "The truth is far removed. There are times when one is strangely at odds with one's environment, during which one begins to doubt the gilt of the first joy. To live on an island is to lay oneself open to all the horrors of the elements; it is to have to be self-sufficient in all those comforts we so often take for granted.

"And yet the magic of first joy persists. The Hebrides are a drug to be shunned at all costs unless one is prepared for permanent addiction. The highlights remain long after the cold and the wet, the disappointments and disillusionments are all forgotten."

JOHN LISTER-KAYE
"The magic of first joy. . ."

It is this "magic of first joy," shared with John Lister-Kaye, that persists for his readers, too. That, and a fuller, keener appreciation of the dedication and the depth of understanding and compassion of men like Gavin Maxwell and John Lister-Kaye who have devoted their lives, energies and intellects to the cause of smoothing the disruptions that threaten a harmonious coexistence of man with his fellow creatures and the elements.

FOR THE sizable cult that has developed for the novels of B. Traven, Hill & Wang has published a Desmond Vesey translation of "General from the Jungle," one of Traven's six jungle series novels written in the 1930s and dealing with the revolutionary Mexico of more than two decades earlier. This story of a guerrilla band at war with the forces of the dictator, Porfirio Diaz, was never before published in America. It is priced at $8.95.

THE VOLUME is there, if not the quality, in George Jessel's "The Toastmaster General's Favorite Jokes," published by Hawthorn Books at $7.95. There are 217 pages, packed with something or other. It is aimed primarily at the public speaker, and if7you have the nerve to try these out upon an audience, they are broken down by topcis — marriage, kids, restaurants, camping, etc. Things like: "In a democracy every man is free to choose his own form of government — blonde, brunette, or redhead." Try that one the next time you're invited to address a women's rights affair.

STERLING Publishing Co., that good friend of the hobbyist, continues to issue excellent craft, sports and pastime guides to help Americans fill their increasing leisure hours.

Topping the newest batch is a new printing of "First Book of Chess" by I.A. Horowitz and Fred Reinfeld. First published in 1952 and now in its ninth printing, the book is claimed by its publisher to be "the book from which Bobby Fischer once said he first learned the game." And the book has earned continuing praise and widespread use as a manual for beginners.

Also appearing in a new, enlarged edition is "Coin Collecting As a Hobby" by Burton Hobson, with revisions that reflect the recent changes in the world monetary system and other added material. Searching through pocket change is no longer an effective method of collecting, author Hobson notes. He offers some alternatives.

"Pigeon Racing" by experts Dr. Herbert R. Axelrod and Edwin C. Welty Jr. is a new and thicker book with instruction on training techniques including some, says the publisher, that have never before been made public. It is a comprehensive text on the selection and care of birds and on competition in races and shows, as well as training.

The pigeon racing book sells for $7.95, the chess and coin collecting manuals for $3.50. All three are appropriately illustrated.

THE CAT'S EYE by Claude Aveline; Doubleday, 242 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Two European masters of the crime novel have new books first published in France now out in English.

Georges Simenon's "Maigret and the Informer" has everybody's favorite Parisian detective investigating the murder of a former gangster turned restaurateur with the help of a "stool pigeon" and the hindrance of the dead man's pretty widow and some sinister underworld figures.

Claude Aveline's "The Cat's Eye" has a shifting scene, from Paris to Lyons and back to Paris. The gruesome discovery of a woman's severed arm in luggage carried by a young art student starts Chief Inspector Belot and confederates on a winding and confusing trail in search of a murderer. Art forgery figures in the case.

Both novels are well worth the reading — superior examples of their genre.

Between the two, the Simenon book wins top laurels. For one thing, his original French has been given a smooth and easy translation by Lyn Moir. Aveline apparently writes a more stylistically Gallic narrative, posing problems for his translator Peter Green, and resulting in some awkward phrasing and unfamiliar slang in the English version. Also, Simenon has kept a simpler plot than Aveline's rather complicated storyline, so that one can concentrate fully upon the wonderful nuances and insights that in a Simenon book always tell us so much about the nature of the human animal.

Incidentally, in Switzerland where he now lives, Simenon has announced the retirement of himself and Maigret as writer and sleuth respectively. Let's hope both can be persuaded to reconsider.

Economy Cuts, Mennonite Fare

By MAXINE KEOWN

Meat prices have been the public's and the press' favorite "whipping boy" in the current furor over inflationary food costs. Hence the almost certain success of "The Low-Cost Meat Book" (Doubleday, $6.95) by Nancy and Arthur Hawkins.

The Hawkinses are New Jerseyites, he an art director and designer, she a housewife. But they have both been active in the cookbook field, his best known previous work being "The Steak Book," her previous effort entitled "Let's Cook."

In collaborating on "The Low-Cost Meat Book" they attempt to steer their readers away from the more expensive meats and to introduce them to the possibilities of the so-called economy cuts.

There is the requisite introductory material on how to select your meat. Then follow 147 recipes that make use of flank and skirt steakes instead of T-bone or sirloin, of the organ meats — liver, sweetbreads, kidneys, hearts, brains —, of tongue, of shanks, of the chuck, of ground meats, of leftovers, etc.

You don't have to resort to hot dogs, the Hawkins claim, to eat meat and stay within a budget. Marinades, sauces, stuffings, stews, meatballs, sausages, pot roasts, and barbecues are some of the answers. And perhaps, most important of all, the imaginative preparation of those highly nutritious variety or organ meats, against which so many eaters are so unfortunately prejudiced to their great detriment.

Even with the Hawkinses help, your meat bill is still going to take a considerable slice from the paycheck. But it's a good compromise between insolvency and vegetarianism.

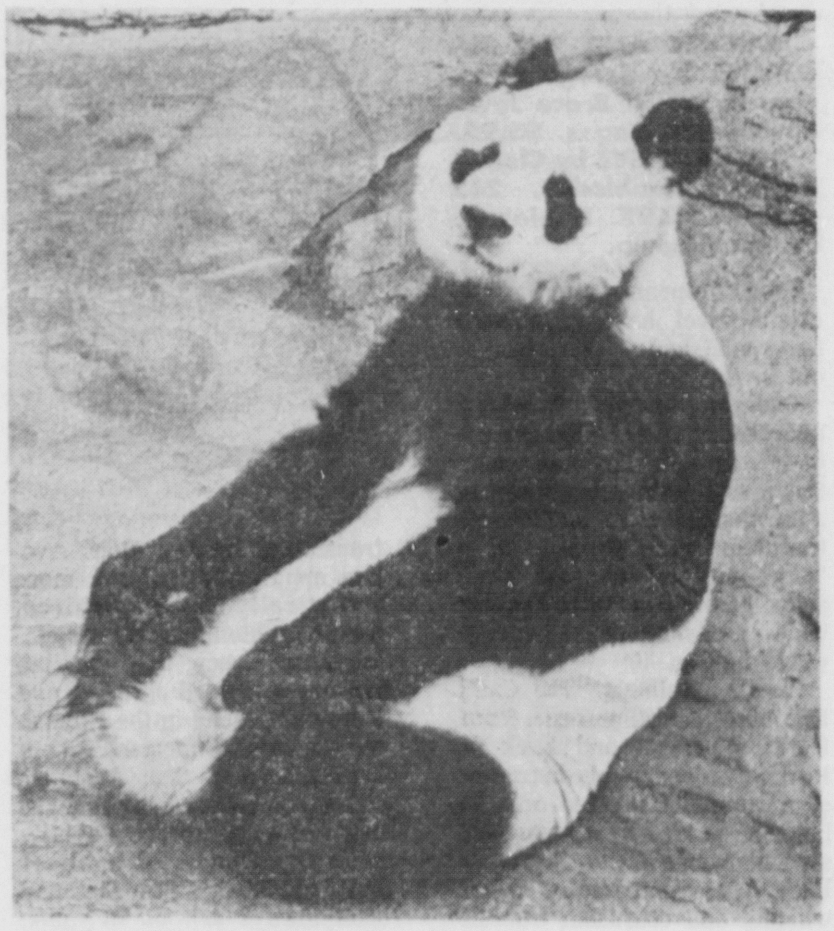
MENNONITE housewives have been justly famous for their mouthwatering country style cooking. From the Pennsylvania Dutch country comes "Food That Really Schmecks" (McGraw-Hill, $6.95) by Edna Staebler, freelance writer and author of the earlier "Sauerkraut and Enterprise." Her recipes are the ones traditionally associated with Pennsylvania Dutch-Mennonite cuisine — potato soup, cream schnitz pie, egg dumplings, green tomato relish, German buns, sausages with apples, wiener schnitzel, apple fritters, funeral (raisin) pie, Easter cheese, etc.

Be forewarned: The Mennonite women were not and are not ones to worry about calories. They were accustomed to hard-working men who burnt up a lot of energy. But the 297 pages are packed with some of the most tempting recipes to crop up in any recent cookbook. And the author also throws in some interesting Mennonite folklore and culture.

THE TITLE "Homemade Bread Cook Book" is in itself sufficient to start the mouth to watering and the nostrils twitching. The label that marks it a Better Homes and Gardens book provides assurance of quality in content and an attractive presentation. And a further notice that natural breads and sourdough recipes are stressed, along with easy-mix yeast breads, muffins and biscuits, is in keeping with current interest patterns.

The $1.95 price tag makes this beautifully illustrated book a bargain. The basics of bread-making are covered. And then you can graduate to such specialities as hot cross buns, stollen, rye pretzels, caramel-pecan rolls, Syrian bread, croissants, sesame loaf and a variety of sourdough loaves and rolls. There are 100 breads in all. And one can hardly wait for that most pleasant of aromas to begin excluding from the oven.

FOR PANDAPHILES



IRMENGARDEN EBERLE, who has acquired a considerable reputation with her nature and animal books for children, has turned her attention upon one of the rarest and most appealing creatures inhabiting this earth. "Pandas Live Here" (Doubleday, $4.95) explores the remote world and little known ways of the Giant Panda — their behavior both in their native Far Eastern habitat, and in captivity. Accompanying her informative text is a collection of photographs that once again prove the panda among the most appealing of all animals. Included is the photo above, by Gordon Smith for the National Audubon Society.

WITH THE essential climbing poles in hand, a party ascending Mount Fujiyama meets another group descending. The scene is just above the fifth of the 10 stages in the climb of the 12,395-foot volcano. And from here on the climb will get more difficult — and more expensive. Many prefer to end their climb at the fifth stage. And others hire horses there that they can ride to the 9,000-foot level. The rest of the way must be achieved on foot, and the last 2,000 feet of the climb are the roughest, advises Colleen Bare in the article below. But she made the climb, and she has some advice for others who might be considering scaling Fuji during the climbing months of July and August. (Photo by David Willis)

So You Want To Climb Mount Fuji?

By COLLEEN BARE

Almost anyone can. Even we, typical unathletic, luxury-loving American types, made it to the top of Mount Fuji.

But the effort proved to be more strenous than we had previously visualized, and we staggered down the mountain with some definite ideas on how a soft American can best climb Fuji.

First you should know a little of the history of the "National Mountain of Japan" in order to appreciate the significance of your upward climb. During the climbing season of July 1 to Aug. 31, more than 100,000 Japanese each year make a religious pilgrimage up the slopes of Mount Fuji, which has been considered sacred since ancient times.

Mount Fuji is called Fujiyama or Fuji san, ama and san both meaning mountain, while the word Fuji refers to fire. It is 12,395 feet high and is considered one of the two most perfect cone-shaped volcanoes in the world, the other being Mount Cotopaxi in Equador.

THE VOLCANO has had 19 recorded eruptions from 781 to 1707, the most violent occurring in 800, 864 and 1707. The last eruption was intermittent, lasting almost two weeks, and spread six inches of ashes over Tokyo, even though the city is 75 miles away. This Konide-type volcano now is dormant although high subterranean heat, located at the summit and the 1707 eruption site, indicates that it is not dead.

After you have climbed the mountain you will recognize the bravery of the first foreigner to reach the summit on Sept. 10, 1860. He was Sir Rutherford Alcock, the first British minister to Japan, who took two days to reach the top.

Women were barred from climbing to the summit until 1872.

AS YOU STRUGGLE up the rocky path, at times feeling discouraged, think about the ancient priests (called yamabushi) who practiced Buddhist asceticism and fire worship by climbing Mount Fuji while it was actively erupting.

The oldest reference to the ascent of Mount Fuji, including a description of "pure-blue magma" boiling in the crater of the summit, was in 870, which proves that the mountain has been attracting climbers for a long time.

There are six climbing routes or paths to the No. 1 view of Japan: Kawaguchiko, Subashiri, Gotemba, Yoshida, Fuji-no-miya and Shoji.

WE TOOK THE Kawaguchiko route, which is the most northerly and the closest by train from Tokyo. The main routes have 10 stages, located at various distances up the mountain, where stone huts with heavy metal roofs have been built to serve as refreshment stations and sort of hostels or primitive-type hotels.

Each hut sells many kinds of soft drinks, canned meats, fruits, and even water which becomes more precious at the higher elevations. Since all of these provisions have to be carried up the mountain by porters, everything becomes more expensive as you approach the top.

Most of the huts also have Japanese-style sleeping accommodations consisting of mattresses placed on tatami mats. Some of the stations even call themselves hotels, though they are far from luxury-oriented. Barkers hawk their wares at these stations and the amount you pay seems to vary with the time of day, the traffic and the seller's mood of the moment.

WE PAID 200 yen (76 cents) for soft drinks going up the mountain and 250 yen (about 95 cents) at the same stations on the return trip. If you can speak Japanese and are good at haggling, you might be able to do better.

Climbing poles are sold at each station, and these are more than just souvenirs; they become necessities. As the path gets steep and rocky, a pole can save you from falling and be of great help. Each of the 10 stations has branding irons in open fires to brand your pole with the altitude and station number, so that you can prove that you made it that far. The cost of the pole is 200 yen, the branding 30 yen at the lower stations and 50 yen at the top.

A bus runs from Kawaguchiko to the fifth station, which is at an elevation of 8,250 feet, on the Fuji toll road.

IF YOU ARE driving a car, you can stop at the white building at the beginning of the toll road which is a Fujiyama museum. Many Japanese only go up as far as the fifth station, which you can do also if you decide that climbing to the top is not your cup of Oriental tea.

If you are lazy or tired but still determined, you can rent a horse at the fifth station which will take you to the seventh station, an altitude of nearly 9,000 feet. Beyond this point the path becomes too steep and craggy for the horses to navigate. Horse rentals cost about 2,500 yen ($9.50).

The last 2,000 feet of the climb are, literally, the roughest. The sharp slope becomes very rocky with many turns. It zigs and zags, and the trail becomes so precipitous you may need to hold onto the chains that have been set up to assist struggling climbers.

ALTHOUGH IT is said that someone is climbing Mount Fuji every day of the year, it would be risky to try it except during the July-August climbing season, which is the only time these stations are operating.

Weather conditions on the mountain become very inclement during the winter months when its slopes are covered with snow, the average temperature being 19.2 degrees below zero with winds up to 160 miles per hour.

Actually, the best time to see the mountain is in January when it is visible from the ground for 18 days out of the 31. However, during July and August it can be seen only four days each month, due to summer cloud formations.

THERE ARE SEVERAL plans of attack for the conquering of Fuji. The traditional one is to begin the climb in the late evening, struggle upwards all night, and arrive at the top in time to view the most beautiful sunrise around.

Having climbed the mountain, we can now state that this method would be very difficult for the average American tourist. A typhoon kept us from following the custom, and we ended up climbing all day to reach the summit around 4 p.m., then descending into the night.

The rocky, sloping path is hard enough to maneuver during the day. In darkness, you not only could be surrounded by thousands of other flashlight-toting climbers but could not see the magnificent view visible from all points along the mountainside.

WE HAVE DECIDED that the easiest battle plan would be to climb to the top of the mountain one day, stay all night at the 10th station "hotel," and arise with the sun to photograph the view and examine the large crater. This crater has had sacred significance for hundreds of years, and descending into the crater has special religious meaning for the Japanese.

By sleeping at the top of the mountain, you would be refreshed and able to climb down into the crater which is 700 feet deep and 600 yards in diameter. You also can take a path along the edge of the crater. Eight small mountain peaks surround the crater, and from these you look down on an awesome world of white billowy clouds and blue lakes far below.

Also at the summit is the weather station, established in 1932, and the weather observation radar dome built in 1965.

THE TRIP DOWN the mountain can be as hard as going up, depending on how you do it. Many people slide down the cinder trail, which consists of a trough piled with cinders which can scrape any exposed part of you and fill your mouth, eyes, nose, and hair with cinder scraps, dirt and dust. You slide on your back, feet and hands for four miles.

If you plan to use this method of descent you should be dressed for it. We were not dressed for it and ended up climbing down, which took us almost as long as the upward climb of six hours.

The Wildflower Show Is Under Way

The low deserts in the Palm Springs area and the mountain canyons surrounding the spectacular Southern California resort community are alive now with all colors of the rainbow as numerous wildflowers are coming into bloom.

Blossoming has been a month early this year due to a premature and rare rainfall, and the flowers are expected to remain in bloom through April. Shadings range from bright colors to quiet pastels, with yellows and purples offering a free visual treat for visitors and residents alike, according to the Palm Springs Convention and Visitors Bureau.

Describing the numerous blossoms as one of the most outstanding displays in recent years, desert plant authority Pat Moorten said a trip into the Palm Springs area is most rewarding right now.

MRS. MOORTEN, with her husband, "Cactus Slim" Moorten, founded in 1938 and operate the Desert Botanical Gardens in Palm Springs. Located in the heart of the resort on South Palm Canyon Drive, the gardens have more than 30 varieties of the desert wildflowers currently in bloom. The garden displays some 2,000 species of desert plants in the two-acre park-like outdoor museum.

It is open daily 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. for visitors who wish to see all the desert plants in one location.

"Desert plant life is strong in the Palm Springs area," Mrs. Moorten said. "The plants are buffeted by some pretty strong winds, sit through a summer of sun, withstand cool nights and don't get much water. For plant life, that's a rough diet."

ODDLY ENOUGH, the wildflower enthusiast can find many blooming species within the city limits of Palm Springs. Found almost everywhere along the main streets, colorful varieties can also be found near the airport, mountain slopes and toward the famous Palm and Andreas Indian canyons.

In Chino Canyon, at the base of the Palm Springs Aerial Tramway, visitors will find a good showing of Encilia. A gray-green ball of stems, this bush suddenly bursts into small yellow blossoms each Spring. It's one of the area's most populous species.

Also to be found in Chino Canyon are displays of Chuperosa (hummingbird bush), with its red trumpet flower; the purple flowered Sand Verbena and the Desert Lavender.

DRIVING THROUGH Palm Springs and south on Palm Canyon Drive about three miles, wildflower lovers can easily find prominent displays of Cresosote (larrea bush), which also displays a yellow flower.

Driving east on Highway 111, travelers can turn left on Frank Sinatra Drive into the sand dune area for a look at the desert annuals. A right turn on Bob Hope Drive going past the Eisenhower Medical Center will give visitors and residents a chance to see the Desert Primrose, a night-blooming white flower that turns pink in the morning.

Trees indigenous to the Southern California desert are colorful contributors to this spring display. The Palo Verde is one of the most stunning specimens. Its graceful limbs are a solid green, now embellished with thousands of five-petal golden flowers.

WOODY SUCCULENTS are especially at home in the Palm Springs area.

The Ocotillo displays a red flame flower at the tip of its branches, while the Joshua tree and Spanish Bayonet, both varieties of the Yucca, blossom for at least a month. The flower of the Joshua tree is exceptionally interesting, exploding into a cluster of cream colored, waxy, lily blooms, Mrs. Moorten explained.

The hardy Century plant, Agave Deserti, has one of the most fasinating blooms. The plant itself may grow to four or more feet in diameter, and after about 20 years, matures and produces an immense asparagus-like stalk, 15 to 20 feet in height, that explodes with golden blooms.

CACTUS PLANTS are ample. One of the most prevalent is the purple Beavertail prickly pear with pink flowers. Others include the Hedgehog (strawberry) cactus; the "Jumping" Cholla with its golden spines and flowers; the Fishhood, the Foxtail and Pincushion varieties (pink blooms); and the Red Barrel Cactus with yellow flowers, also much in evidence in the canyons and hillsides.

Highly unusual are the belly flowers, miniature, complete wildflowers which are so tiny viewers must literally be on their tummies to see the perfectly-formed mini-blossoms.

A HOLIDAY VILLAGE in Sweden offers the visitor to Scandinavia an opportunity to enjoy economically the bracing fresh air and the scenic beauty of that country's flawless forest, coastal, lake and mountain areas. Travelers to rural Sweden can choose from among castles, farmhouses, log cabins and manor houses in picking their accommodations. (Swedish National Tourist Office photo)

Take Your Pick Of Life Styles In Sweden

Besides a nationwide system of hotels and motels, Sweden offers vacationers an opportunity to live like a king . . . or a baron . . . or a Swedish farmer . . . at castles, manor houses and country homes scattered throughout the Swedish provinces.

Rich in history and reasonable in price, many of Sweden's hundreds of castles and manors have been opened to guests as restaurants or inns, providing gracious surroundings for a day's visit or a week's stay.

At the 16th Century Gripsholm Castle, which edges Lake Malaren in the province of Sodermanland, for example, you can stay at Sweden's oldest inn for about $20 per day, including meals.

At another, Tullgarn Castle, which has been used as a royal residence since 1772 and contains an outstanding art collection, accommodations and meals are available for about $13 per person daily.

OR, IF YOU'RE feeling truly romantic, at the 15th Century Stora Bjurum in Vastergotland Province, you can be married in the castle's small chapel, arrange a special wedding dinner and spend the night in the castle's bridal suite!

Sweden's manor houses, which actually are private estates still occupied by the baronial families who own them, offer a variety of guest accommodations ranging from room and full pension to accommodations with use of kitchen facilities for self-catering.

In addition to tastefully furnished guest rooms, visitors are free to feel at home in the manors' elegantly appointed drawing rooms and sitting rooms, gardens and parks, and usually have an opportunity to become acquainted with their host.

Most of the estates offer facilities for swimming, boating and lake fishing, golf, horseback riding or other sports and are located near historic or scenic attractions such as the Gota Canal or the Gosta Berling country described in the writings of Nobel Prize authoress Selma Lagerlof.

WEEKLY RATES FOR manor house vacations average $65 per person, including breakfast and dinner.

An ideal country vacation for those traveling with children is offered by more than 100 Swedish farm families who have opened their homes to visitors. Located in peaceful rural areas, the farmhouses combine old-world settings with modern conveniences.

For an average of $3.50 per person daily you can enjoy a comfortable bed and country breakfast, plus the congeniality of your Swedish hosts who operate the farm. The daily rate is cut in half for children under 12 years.

Ponds and lakes for swimming or fishing are usually on the property or nearby, and youngsters, especially, often find fun in joining in the daily farm chores.

STILL ANOTHER WAY to enjoy an inexpensive family holiday in Sweden is by renting a chalet or log cabin at one of the country's coastal, mountain or inland lake areas.

Specially built chalets feature a living room, two bedrooms, kitchen and toilet facilities and are equipped with cooking utensils, dishes, cutlery, blankets and pillows to accommodate four persons.

Log cabins offer a simpler, more rustic type of accommodation and usually are located in more remote areas, but, as with the chalets, are maintained according to rigid standards of local tourist authorities. Rentals of chalets or log cabins average $60 per week. Guests must provide their own bed linen and towels at both.

The French Alps Where The Ski Season Lasts All Year

By PETER TONGE

LES ARCS, France — Leaving Bourg St. Maurice, a pleasant little town on the valley floor, you can drive for better than half an hour without ever losing sight of the railway yard, electric power station and soccer field, which are its principal landmarks.

When you step out here at the ski resort of Les Arcs, Bourg St. Maurice is still clearly visible just one mile away. One mile — straight down!

That's the French Alps for you: towering, massive beautiful. Breathtaking sums it all up.

Over at neighboring Tigne, the scene is even more dramatic. The peaks would puncture the very sky if that were possible. Here, high above the timberline, so high that the snows never met, skiers schush the slopes the whole year round.

THE SKI TRAILS OF these French Alps have at last come into their own. New modern resorts have sprung up in the last five to 15 years. Belatedly, too, the French have begun doing what the Austrians and Swiss began decades ago: They are telling the world about it.

In effect they are saying: The slopes that produced Jean Claude Killy are yours to ski upon.

Moreover the choice is wide and the cost reasonable. Air France, for instance, will fly East Coast Americans to Geneva and thence by ground transport to any one of nine modern "Sno" stations and back again for as little as $305.

That cost includes accommodation in a hotel or condominium, with kitchenette, and a continental breakfast for eight days. Chicago skiers pay $403 for the same thing, Los Angeles $454. Indeed, the company offers special tour rates from most of the cities from which it flies.

SKIING HAS SKYROCKETED in France just as it has in the rest of Europe, the United States, and Japan. Says a Les Arcs insturctor, or monitor as they term an instructor here: "Skiing is the Frenchman's favorite non-team sport."

To meet the growing demand for recreational skiing, the French began looking for suitable mountain areas back in the early 1950s. That's when some townsfolk of Aime and Marcot got together to discuss a vast bowl high above them where the resort of La Plagne now stands.

They discovered it one night in 1944 when a Royal Air Force bomber slipped between the lofty peaks and dropped arms and explosives for French resistance fighters high up on the Tarentaise mountain. Those villagers waiting to retrieve the arms were all impressed by the natural amphitheater in which they found themselves, No one except an occasional herdsman, it seems, had ever ventured that high before.

Today a small stone monument at the base of one of the telecabins linking one part of the resort with another, commemorates that event.

SAYS CHRISTIAN BRUSCHI, a tourist-bureau official here. "But for that arms trop LaPlagne might not yet exist."

The fact remains, it does exist, and like all the resorts it is getting more international by the year.

Ten years ago when Bruschi worked aboard the SS Ill de France, he would speak to American skiers sailing for Europe and the slopes of Austria and Switzerland.

"Why don't you try France?" he would ask. "France!" they would frequently exclaim. "Is there any skiing there?"

That of course was before the French idol Killy raced away with a sheaf of gold medals at the Grenoble Olympics in 1968. Now other tongues mingle with French at the snow resorts. In many instances French skiers make up only 50 per cent of visitors to a resort.

GERMAN IS THE foreign language most frequently spoken. But, say the French, English in both American and British accents, is increasing rapidly.

SO HIGH IS the French Alpine resort of Tigne that the snow stays all year and the skiing never ends. More and more winter sportsmen have discovered the French slopes in recent years, with their fine new facilities and reasonable prices.

At La Plagne a score or more little English and French pre-schoolers would daily follow their monitor down the slopes, weaving this way and that at what seemed incredible speed for those so young. At the same time they displayed a control and dexterity that left this writer staring in disbelief and admiration.

In doing so these youngsters underscored a point that overseas visitors, Americans in particular, need to know about the Alps: Nature didn't design them exclusively for the expert skier. There are gentle slopes for beginners as well as the more precipitous ones for the Killys.

The French, by the way, have a rather lovely word for the beginner or novice, as we say in English. They call him a "debutant."

They also have good ski schools, all of which now teach by the graduated length method.

Honolulu's Bishop Complex Is Most Unusual Museum

A double-decker bus right off the streets of London, an historical old sailing ship, live theater presentations, and a planetarium all have something in common in Honolulu.

All are part of the Bernice P. Bishop Museum — a far cry from the mental image that the word "museum" usually produces.

The Bishop Museum's widespread complex within Honolulu has grown gradually with careful planning by its director, Dr. Roland Force, who thinks museums should be in tune with the times.

THE MOST recent addition to the complex is Heritage Theater, set in the charming King's Alley, a square block of scaled-down replicas of turn-of-the-century shops and restaurants in Waikiki.

Heritage Theater is elegance personified.

It has red carpeting, red brocade-effect wallcovering, crystal chandeliers, and a jewel-like theater where a Lillian Russell singing "I'm Only A Bird In A Gilded Cage" would be in perfect keeping with the mood. Indeed, just such songs are performed — although without a Miss Russell — in the "Victorian Varieties" musical program presented in the theater.

OTHER PROGRAMS offered in Heritage Theater are "Music of the Monarchy Period," performed by a trio of singers and a troupe of dancers;" Ancient Hawaiian Chants and Hulas;" "Polynesian Ensemble;" a film called "Whaler Out of New Bedford," that depicts the whaling period in Hawaii's history; a playlet called "Robert Louis Stevenson — A Victorian Visitor," and lei-making demonstrations (Saturday only).

In the Stevenson play, Allen Harvey is the lead actor. He also is Heritage Theater's manager-producer-director. The cast includes two other actors.

Programs in the theater are scheduled variously during the week, with performances daily at 2 and 8 p.m.

HERITAGE THEATER'S floor plan comprises four areas. The entry area has a bookshop. An inner room features memorabilia of Hawaiian royalty, such as King Kalakaua's Royal Orders from the courts of Liberia, Serbia, Japan and Rumania; swords; pistols; a magnificent carved meerschaum table-model pipe, and a beautiful billiard table that belonged to Prince Kuhio.

Another room displays the crown of Queen Kapiolani, the yellow feather cape of Kamehameha I, and the Kukailomoku-War God image. A fourth room displays clothing of the royal era, and portraits of the Kamehameha lineage.

Then there is the theater auditorium itself.

To cover the entire Bishop Museum complex in one day is impossible. The "passport" concept eliminates the pressure on the interested visitor of having to rush through each of the museum's parts.

FACING REALITIES

We must always try to face the world
In all of its various realities;
But we must also remember that
Only the selected few really know
The true meaning of this term.
Too many illusions blind us from Recognizing the real from the unreal.

FAIRFAX — DOROTHY LYNN

The Garden Page

For Healthy Turf, Regular Attention Is The Best Policy

If some federal agency could come up with a computerized estimate on how many acres of land are dedicated to lawn use throughout America, the figure would be astronomical.

And, even though artificial turfs are showing up here and there, there is nothing like a beautiful lawn. Most home gardeners wouldn't even consider a substitute.

The California Assn. of Nurserymen suggests that a little effort frequently applied will go a long way. Certainly, it's better than the infrequent big effort which usually comes too late.

ONE EXCEPTION to this is your watering schedule. It's better to train a lawn to take a deep watering less frequently — to encourage deep root growth — rather than daily shallow sprinklings.

Though it will vary by soil, a good rule of thumb is to water deeply once a week in cool dry weather, twice a week during warm dry weather. The length of time to water will depend on the soil condition, but strive to achieve actual water penetration of six to eight inches.

Water in the morning. Waterings in late afternoon or evening encourage fungus diseases.

YOUR LAWN feeding program should start immediately. Regular feeding is important. Your nurseryman can recommend the proper lawn food for the type turf you have.

Where weeds are a problem, ask about the weed control products available today. Repeat applications will be necessary.

Mowing is very important to the health of a lawn, as well as appearance. Mow weekly during the growth season, less often when growth slows.

IF YOU LOWERED your mower to cut at one-inch during winter, make sure it's one and a half to two inches as weather warms up. Cutting a lawn too short in hot weather exposes the crowns of the individual grass plants. This ruins its appearance — and future.

National Lawn and Garden Week ushers in spring, and gardeners will be feeding their lawns. A reminder: even though right now this winter's unprecedented rainfall has soaked the ground, always make sure the soil is moist to a depth of four inches before feeding lawns. The leaves (foliage) should be dry before applying the lawn food.

After application, hand wash the lawn food off the foliage. Follow immediately with thorough, deep irrigation. Water well on the second day, then return to your normal schedule.

In Praise Of Lawns And Gardens

Next week is National Lawn and Garden Week — a time to reflect on the role that trees, shrubs, flowers, and lawns, play in our lives and the contributions they make towards a quality environment.

Today's trend to "return to nature" has seen a renewal of interest in home fruit orchards, and vegetable gardens — reminiscent of the Victory Garden era during World War II.

Americans are bringing nature indoors — house plants, in unprecedented number and variety, are being enjoyed by young and old alike.

Part of this return to nature can be attributed to the environmental concerns expressed by those interested in the future of Mother Earth. All this augments, and coincides with, the positive actions by individuals and groups who, for decades, have provided ideas and leadership that brought about the beautification of neighborhoods and communities throughout the land.

It comes as no surprise today to read that a 50-by-50 foot plot of lawn provides enough oxygen to sustain a family of four, day by day. Facts like this are in the news.

Or, that trees and shrubs trap and filter dust and dirt particles from the air we breathe. These oxygen-producing plants also serve as barriers to sounds, especially important in cities where noise frays man's nerves.

It's significant that plants in the home garden, downtown plantings and community parks all contribute more to our lives than appears on the surface.

One Aftermath Of Those Rains

The heavy winter rains may have induced mildew and molds on leaves of some plants and shrubs. This is especially true if plants are so close as to reduce ventilation. One common fungi is gray mold. You may notice it on lilac and other shrubs, where leaves and stems will twist and curl.

Pruning can be helpful, in conjunction with use of a fungicide. Prune enough to allow sun and light to penetrate.

FOR THAT SHADY SPOT

THE CINERARIA is a top shade gardening choice in California, now available in nursery flats, and at some places in larger containers already laden with buds or bloom for instant color for bare areas. The ready-to-bloom size Cineraria can also be used in containers to decorate your entryway. In the garden, they should be set out 12 to 18 inches apart, incorporating a planter mix into the soil to provide the necessary organic material that assures a good start and good drainage for these acid-loving plants. Once established, feed them monthly with an acid-type plant food. Though frost may pose problems, they are hardier than generally given credit for. And while they can endure short periods of drought, they are happiest with generous amounts of water. Here is your solution to that problem area under the huge shade tree or on the north side of the house.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

✓ Feed Camellias after they've finished blooming. Your nurseryman can recommend the acid-type plant food to use.

✓ Summer-blooming bulbs such as Dahlias, Canna Lilies, and Mexican Shell Flowers (Tigridias) may be planted now. Plant Gladiolus every few weeks — into early summer — for a succession of color from these easy-to-grow favorites.

✓ Feature dwarf Oranges and Lemons in tubs on your patio or sunny porch. Nurseries have a good selection of citrus now, and offer the varieties best for local conditions.

✓ Most leafy salad vegetables, and many others, as well, are available as nursery transplants for easy transfer to your culinary garden.

INSIDE YOUR HOME: When Simplicity Is Essential

By CAROLYN MURRAY

There are two distinct periods in our lives when we seem to have special, identical needs as far as a home environment is concerned.

One is at the beginning of our personal, non-family life. The other comes at the end of our lives, when children, mates and perhaps careers are gone from our everyday happenings.

Strange, isn't it, that the 18 to 20-year-old, embarking on a first apartment away from parental supervision, might be planning a perfect interior for his or her own retirement years?

LET'S COMPARE the needs of these seemingly different groups:

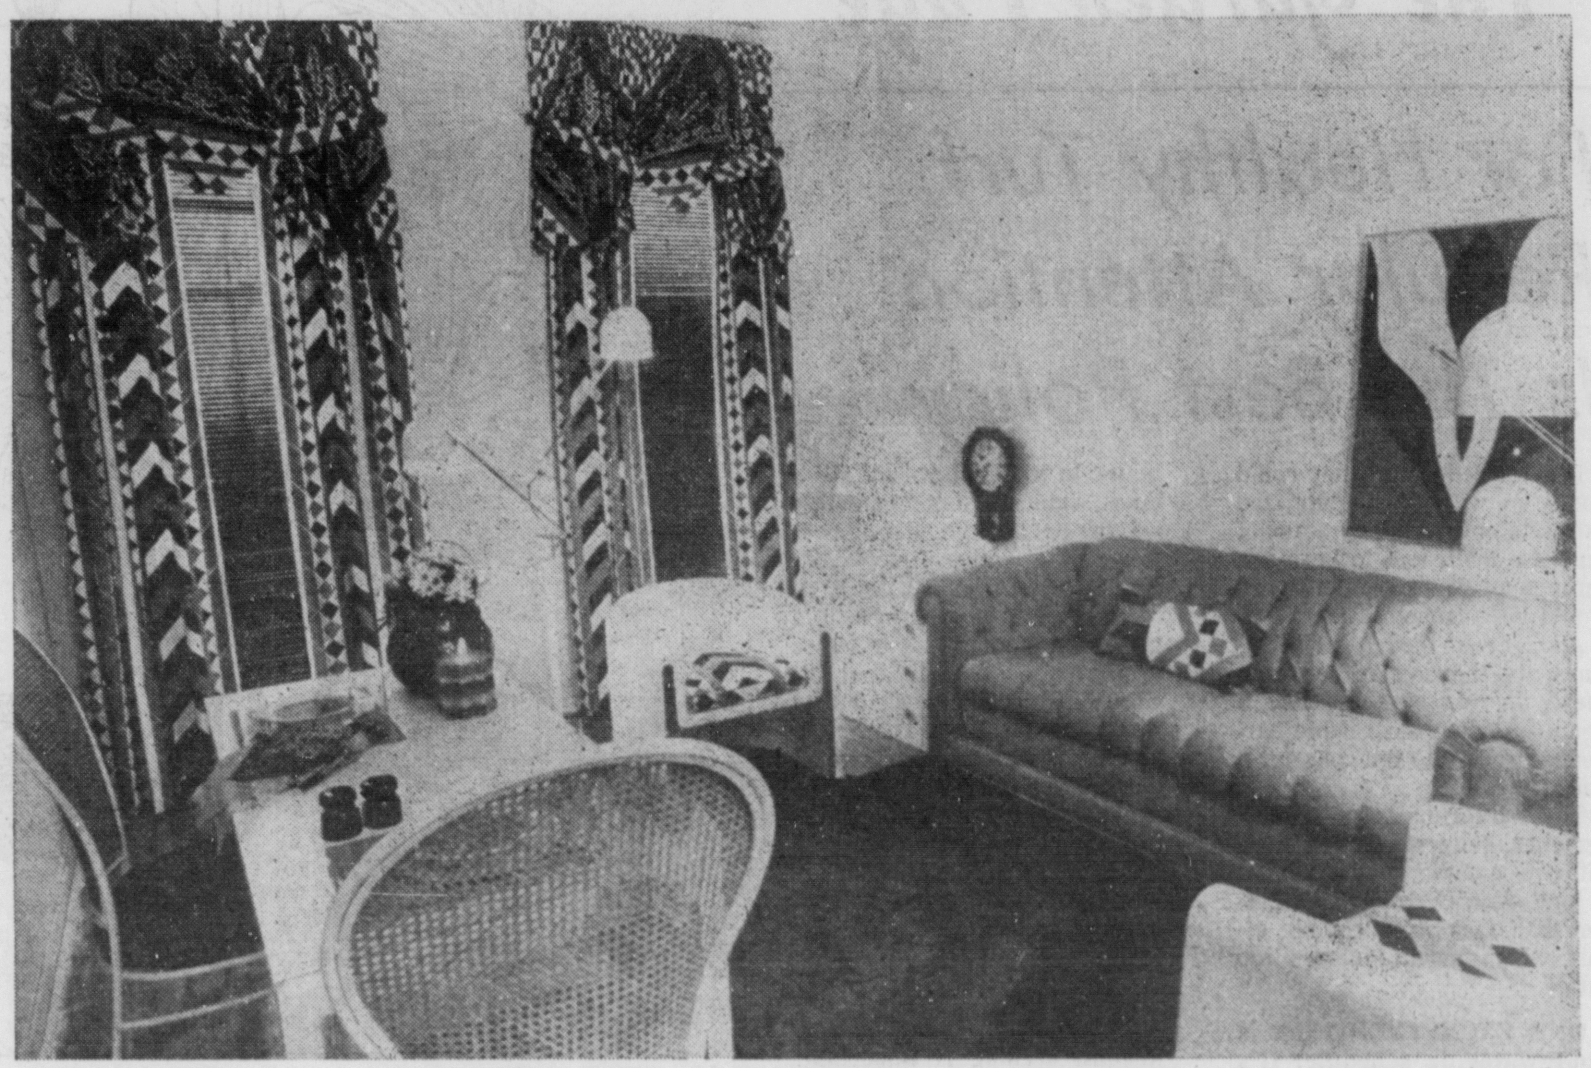
Each wants independence and an environment that reflects their own personality in small ways. Each requires a minimal kitchen and food-storage area, comfortable but not luxurious sleep facilities and a compact, but attractive bathroom. Low upkeep is essential, since the younger generation won't have the time to fuss over a fancy environment; the oldsters won't have the energy or incentive.

And perhaps most important: Neither wants a big cash expenditure at this point in their lives.

SO WHY WOULDN'T the same basic apartment concept work for both?

It needn't bow to any old-fashioned rules, either, since statistics show that low-income persons and the aged are the quickest to accept innovative ideas in regards to living. They do it more readily than most young-executive families will when going through their high-earning years.

If we could just get housing-planners to realize this shared need, perhaps the young and the old could somehow maintain a more vital relationship. Now we too often provide so-called young swingers with rather lonely-if-you're-not-part-of-the-group choices, and then relegate the retirees to pre-mortuary manors.



HERE IS A SIMPLE and crisp approach to apartment living. And it is just as well suited to the live-alone 80-year-old as the live-alone 18-year-old, both of whom crave independence and comfort. The Simmons-Cambridge Hide-A-Bed and a few adaptable furnishings are the keys to its success.

Right off the bat, I like the white walls and the white plastic and Formica-top furniture. There's a cheerfulness about it, and, with air-conditioning all year round, there's no reason to mask dust and dirt with dark, gloomy colors.

The plastic pieces have surfaces that are easy to clean, and plastic furniture is usually lighter in weight than wood, so it's easier to move as well. The big comfortable Hide-A-Bed by Simmons provides a good splash of cheer with its orange upholstery. Handsome fabrics have been used for window treatments, as pillow covers and to cover doors on another side of the room.

REALLY, THE strength of the coloring and the pattern provide almost enough decoration for a single person. It's foolish to accumulate too many odds and ends of possessions at either age.

The Parsons table works as a sewing table, desk and dining table for one or more individuals. And, except for perhaps the addition of a big ottoman for the elder resident (so feet can be raised), it would be a delightful kind of home for the young or old batching set.

DRESSING UP THE WALLS

SARAH KENNEDY of the "Laugh-In" television series shows you some of the wall hangings and other creations that you can make with the help of Steve Ellingson's Snip 'n Stick Pattern 523. To order it, send $1 to Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent-Journal Pattern Department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409. You will get a treasure trove of eight ideas for "stitchery" projects for which you will never need to touch needle or thread. Glue, rug yarn and felt are your materials. And it's a matter of very little time. Some of the ideas included in the pattern package with its step-by-step instructions in addition to the "Ladybug's Delight" wall-hanging include Pennsylvania Dutch and Vintage Village wall-hangings of felt and glue, three colorful throw pillows (Old Sol, Mod Butterfly and Mr. Owl), and two cheerful, carry-all bags that can be made of either felt or leather. You can pick your own color schemes. And your completed projects will look so much like real stitchery that your friends will be convinced you have spent hours at them, working with needle and thread. Steve Ellingson likes to call this easy-on-the-art technique "gluery-foolery." You might prefer to call it sheer magic.

Strange Noises From The Plumbing

Handyman's Pages

By ANDY LANG

When plumbing lines begin making unusual noises, the wise home owner does something about it. If he doesn't, he's likely to find minor ailments turning into expensive projects.

One of the most common problems is water hammer.

THE OCCURS when a faucet is shut off quickly and there is a hammering or pounding noise, sometimes accompanied by a vibrating of the pipes. It means that an air chamber or shock absorber or pressure reducing valve is needed, which usually will require the services of a plumber unless someone in the house knows how to make a pipe installation and local regulations permit it.

But sometimes it may be that an air chamber (roughtly, an extra section of pipe that forms an air pocket to absorb the rush of water) has become filled with water instead of air. Removing the cap on the air chamber, letting out the water and recapping the pipe will then be sufficient to eliminate the hammer.

IF YOU DECIDE not to get the water hammer fixed immediately, you can do two things to prevent damage to the piping system:

Make sure that every member of the family is told which faucet is the trouble-maker and that most or much of the noise can be prevented by turning off the faucet slowly.

And inspect the water lines at every possible point to be sure that they are rigidly supported. Evn half-an-inch play between the pipe and a beam is sufficient to cause vibration and noise. Sometimes you will find that one of the supporting straps or brackets has worked loose and needs readjustment or replacement.

A CHATTERING or a squealing when the faucet is turned on usually indicateswa defective washer. More often than not, it is the result of a piece of the washer breaking loose inside the faucet.

In any case, check the situation by turning off the water to the fixture, removing the faucet stem and checking the condition of the washer. If a bit of it has come loose, using a tweezers or something similar will enable you to dig it out from inside the faucet. Then, replace the washer.

A RUMBLING and creaking noise in the hot water tank or system very often means that the water is too hot. For most purposes, a temperature of about 140 degrees — certainly no higher than 160 — is sufficient.

Check the tank heat indicator. If it is higher than 140, set it back to that figure and see whether the noise continues. If it does — and you are sure the hot water pipes are all solidly attached to beams and other structural members — you will need a plumber.

WHEN THE plumbing noise is nothing more than the dripping from a cold water pipe, even though there is no leak, it is the result of condensation. Warm, moist air hitting a cold surface causes this. The solution is relatively simple if all or most of the pipe is exposed. Merely cover the pipe with any of the several wrappings sold at home supply dealers specifically for this purpose.

When the moisture-laden air cannot get to the pipe, there is no condensation and thus no drip-drip.

(If you want to save money by fixing things around the house, get a copy of Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1 to Box 5, Teaneck, N.J., 07666.)

A Scandinavian Style For The American Bathroom

New math? No, the new bath!

The one-time "sanitary arrangement" now routinely houses such health care aids as vibrators, massagers and facial steamers in an atmosphere as up-to-date as its duties. Colorful, exotic bath decor is very "in" — and guaranteed to combat the morning blahs.

FOR PEOPLE bored with antiseptic pastels but not ready for riotous color at 6 a.m., there is a pleasant, Scandinavian-inspired alternative. Natural woods can freshen and enrich a bath with the same hardy beauty as the sauna, another Norse import.

Woods like fir, white pine and western hemlock have a clean beauty that sunlights a bath, but darker species are popular in combination with jewel-tone towels and linens.

An exhaust fan with good venting carries off normal condensation, but a polyurethane finish is recommended in splash areas to protect wood and simplify clean-ups.

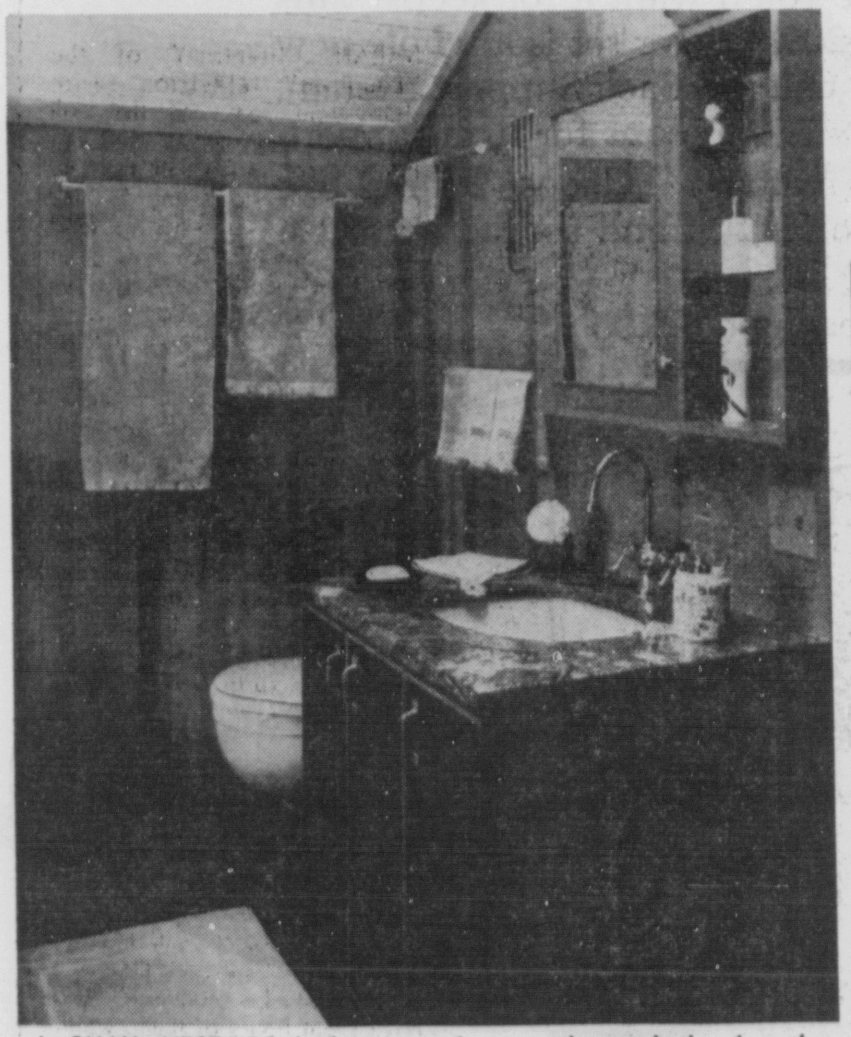
IN ONE YOUNG architect's home, an upstairs bath escapes the humdrum with one-by-four-inch western cedar walls warming a classic combination of black, white and grey in flooring and fixtures.

An aroma of cedar still lingers after four years of hot showers. Accessories create a color scheme of great variety as easily as arranging towels on a rack or fresh flowers in a coffee mug.

Medicines and make-up are neatly filed in a wall-hung cabinet of one-by-six-inch fir boards, a continuation of the woodsy theme. Holes drilled in the frame in vertical rows hold clips for adjustable glass shelves; molding frames the mirrored door.

TOWELS, paper products and cleaning aids that stack up in every bathroom pile into a large under-sink cabinet. Black laminate covers cabinet doors and sides, and silvery-grained black marble tops the counter — both materials requiing minimum maintenance.

He wound up with the high style of the spa in a bathroom still functional and requiring minimum upkeep.



A SMALL UPSTAIRS bathroom took on a luxury look when the architect-owner paneled the walls with resawn western cedar and installed a clear-finished medicine chest of one-by-six fir boards above a marble-topped vanity. The chest is equipped with adjustable glass shelves. And an efficient exhaust fan and ventilating system prevents excessive condensation. (Western Wood Products Assn. photo)

TELEVISION NOTES

By JACK GAVER

Dom DeLuise, who has made a career of being funny on various television shows in recent years, as well as being a regular on Dean Martin's program, may have a half-hour comedy program of his own. He stars in the projected "Lotsa Luck" series intended for NBC and plays a bachelor who is a clerk in the lost-and-found department of a New York City bus line.

The aforementioned "Lotsa Luck," by the way, is another Americanized version of a successful British series. There it is known as "On the Buses." If it gets on here, it will be the third to cross the Atlantic, westward. Already successful in this category are the CBS "All in the Family" and NBC's "Sanford and son."

What CBS bills as "the first rematch between the Russian Olympic basketball team and the United States national team since the Munich Olympics," scheduled by the network for April 29, is not likey to involve the same teams that met in the controversial Munich final, won by Russia. The Soviet team will be the same, but it is virtually certain that the U.S. squad will be at least partially different. Players will be selected after March's post-season tournaments. Could be that the U.S. aggregation will be stronger than the one at Munich.

The NBC estimate of color-TV United States households as of Jan. 1 is 39,400,000 which is 60.1 per cent of all video households and an increase by 5.9 million over January, 1972.

Film star Rosalind Russell will serve as hostess of the CBS "Women of the Year, 1973" special May 21.

Screen Gems will produce "The Policy Story," a two-hour television movie-hopefully a dramatic anthology series for NBC next season-based on material by Los Angeles policeman-author Joseph Wambaugh.

SOME OF THE BEST-KNOWN landmarks of the United States, including the Grand Canyon, left, and Crater Lake, serve as the backdrop for the hour-long special, "The American Idea, Part One: The Land," to be shown Sunday at 8 p.m. on Channels 7 and 11. Dick Van Dyke, the late Edward G. Robinson, Henry and Cloris Leachman are the host-narrators who will recall the hopes, ambitions and thoughts of early settlers in the new land as recorded in family Bibles and diaries. Supplying additional background will be an original score composed by Richard Rodgers and authentic folk songs sung by the Roger Wagner Chorale.

Alan Abel, King Of The Hoaxers

By JAY SHARBUTT

NEW YORK (AP) — Mr. and Mrs. Alan Abel don't raise much cain. They live quietly on Manhattan's West Side. Occasionally, they notify television and newspaper assignment editors about something.

It is at this point things begin to stir.

You may recall reading or seeing reports in 1964 and 1968 about the Best Party's presidential candidate, Mrs. Yetta Bronstein, whose slogan was: "Put a Mother in the White House." Mrs. Bronstein really was Mrs. Abel.

In 1958, her husband, using his own name, stirred up much coverage of his vigorous campaign to cloth naked animals. He headed the Society for Indecency to Animals and appeared on many television talk shows.

Some 10 years later, his campaign still was puttering along. He appeared on "The Merv Griffin Show" and warned the audience: "A nude horse is a rude horse." Griffin knew it was a gag.

But a lot of people still don't, excluding assignment editors here who live in mortal fear of the next move from the Abels. The reason is that the moves have enough apparent truth to make them seem ligitimate, albeit somewhat daft or bizarre.

"I only had to have one little picture of a horse in Bermuda shorts and I could walk into any television show. They practically put me right on the air."

What started his life as a dedicated hoaxer.

"It's difficult to say," he mused. "I guess the key word is frustration. I originally was a performer and not getting anywhere. I found out that if you were a little eccentric or crazy you could attract attention. The Society gave me a platform of sorts."

The Abels' assorted campaigns occasionally result in unsolicited public donations. He sends them all back, but says the Internal Revenue Service has cecked his books seven times in the last 10 years.

This, he said, "is because they probably think I've been stealing Lord knows how many thousands of dollars in donations. So I've been suing to make them let me examine their books and records."

A federal judge in Los Angeles dismissed the suit as "frivolous," but Abel said he may appeal the judge's ruling.

Channel 9's Open Studio

Directors of the Bay Area Educational Television Assn. have allocated $145,000 for the development of minority and community-produced programs to be aired on Channel 9.

The new project has been given the working title of "Open Studio Television."

THE LIFE OF A HOLLYWOOD BACHELOR

By VERNON SCOTT

Rock Hudson is one of the few survivors among movie stars who attempted a television series in the past year or two.

Where Glenn Ford, Anthony Quinn, Jimmy Stewart, Henry Fonda and Jim Garner failed, Hudson, as the star of "McMillan and Wife," prospered for a second season.

Divorced almost 10 years ago, the outsized six-foot, four-inch, 200-pound actor lives in an enormous, Spanish-style home on a peak in Beverly Hills.

Under his supervision the house was almost completely rebuilt, making a few spacious rooms from a multitude of smaller ones.

THE PLACE LOOKS like a movie set. It is decorated with heavy, man-sized furniture. The decor is Spanish and Mediterranean and expertly coordinated by a professional decorator.

Hudson's domicile reflects the personality of the man. There are wall-to-wall record albums, mostly Spanish music. His library is well stocked with biography, novels and history. Various tables are laden with movie scripts sent him by hopeful producers.

A live-in housekeeper takes care of the cleaning chores and prepares all Hudson's meals. She plans the menu and he simply returns from Universal studios and sits down to dinner.

More often than not Rock has a few friends in for the evening meal, after which they head for a converted three-car garage which is now a 20-seat projection room. Two or three nights a week Rock shows movies.

USUALLY THEY ARE brand new films. Occasionally the fare is an old classic. Never is a Rock Hudson picture included.

"How many times would people want to see 'Paza, Son of Cochise.' " Rock asks. "I was the worst looking Indian in movies."

Hudson is essentially an introvert. He dislikes eating in restaurants and big parties make him self-conscious. For that reason he entertains a great deal and enjoys small dinner parties at the homes of friends.

A dog lover, Rock has a pair of mongrels named Sally and WeeWee, a schnauser who answers to Murphy, and a couple of German Shepherds, Fritz and Nick.

A HUGE YARD AND patio give the dogs plenty of space to run.

His property also allows Rock to indulge his favorite pastime, gardening. There's a greenhouse, too, where Hudson spends hours planting, watering and pampering a variety of flowers, plants and shrubs.

If Hudson looks trim it's because he works at it. Twice a day he takes a sauna bath just off his bedroom. Then, still dripping with perspiration, he plunges into his swimming pool — kept at a chilly temperature — swims its length for 15 or 20 minutes.

This ritural takes place every morning before reporting to the studio and every evening after work.

BUT HUDSON'S overriding passion is contract bridge. He will play the game almost any time, anywhere, with anyone. During the lunch break on his NBC series he can be found in his dressing room or a corner of the sound stage playing the card game.

When he isn't showing pictures in his home projection room then he almost certainly is in the library with three friends playing bridge.

THE COMPETITION DOESN'T LIKE THIS AD — WE NAME NAMES

Fisher? Marantz?

The chart tells the story.

It isn't Fisher, or Marantz, or Pioneer or any of the other names you're so used to hearing that gives you the most stereo for the money.

It's Sylvania.

That's right. Sylvania gives you the most stereo receiver for $279.95.* And that's true on the basis of features as well as specs. The Model CR2743 receiver has a full function jack panel. Built-in Sylvania PQ4 matrix four-channel capability. FET's. Ceramic IF filters. D'Arsonval tuning meter. Plenty of pushbuttons, switches, and knobs for all functions. And so on.

Pioneer?.

Still a little surprised? No need to be. Sylvania's not exactly a new name in audio. We were one of the first in the field. It's just that we haven't been emphasizing the component end of it.

But now we're in the component business in a big way. With great values. Like the CR2743 receiver. Or our CR2742, which is the most receiver for $199.95.* We've got speakers that are getting rave reviews in the stereo mags. And of course, we've got Dual and Garrard and BSR McDonald automatic turntables. But don't believe a word you read. Go look at the equipment yourself. Listen to it. See how much you get for how little. On this basis, any choice but a Sylvania has to be second choice.

On The Stereo Scene —

Ethel Waters, And Other Black Singers Who Followed Her Lead

By WILLIAM LAFFLER

Ethel Waters came into prominence at a time when it was almost impossible for a black artist to achieve critical recognition in a white-dominated show business.

But Miss Waters was not an ordinary singer or person. She not only had talent but determination, and in 1973 she became a star in "As Thousands Cheer," an all-white Broadway musical.

She had previously won acclaim for introducing "Dinah" and "Stormy Weather," two tunes which now are regarded as popular classics.

Miss Waters recorded numerous songs during the early stages of her career but not as many as would be hoped for. Thirty-two of them are now available on an excellent two-LP album "Ethel Waters Greatest Years" (Columbia KG 31571).

Although "Dinah" and "Stormy Weather" as well as another great Waters song, "Taking a Chance on Love," are not included in this collection, the selections include "Sweet Georgia Brown," "True Blue Lou," "Come Up and See Me Sometime" and "Waiting at the End of the Road."

This album is exceptionally noteworthy because of the artists who backed up Miss Waters. For instance, Fletcher Henderson may be heard on piano on "I've Found a New Baby." James P. Johnson is the piano soloist on "Lonesome Swallow." Tommy Dorsey and Benny Goodman support Miss Waters on "You Brought a New Kind of Love to Me."

These recordings were made before the hi-fi and stereo eras, so it is not the best sound, but the artistry of Ethel Waters and her musical friends overcome the technical drawbacks.

ETHEL WATERS opened the way for other black singers, among them Dinah Washington.

Dinah died at the age of 39 but she left a valuable legacy of songs. Twenty of them may be heard on "Dinah Washington Immortal" (Roulette RE-125).

While Dinah was known primarily as a blues singer, she could distinguish herself on almost any tune. This selection ranges from such fine songs as "That's My Desire" and "My Devotion" to the bouncier "Somebody Else is Taking My Place" and "Red Sails in the Sunset." One of the songs which stresses the gentle nature of Miss Washington's voice is "That Sunday, That Summer.

ETHEL WATERS

CARRYING ON the tradition today is Dionne Warwicke, who handles the songs of Brian Holland and Lamont Dozier on her newest LP, "Just Being Myself" (Warner Bros, 2658).

After letting herself go on "You're Gonna Need Me" and "I Think You Need Love," Dionne moves into a softer sound on "You Are the Heart of Me" and "I Always Get Caught in the Rain" by Michael Smith and Roland Dunbar.

Other songs are "Don't Let My Teardrops Bother You," "Just Being Myself," "Come Back" and "Don't Burn the Bridge."

TAPE DECK — "Songs of Love" by Charley Pride (RCA P8S-2120) is an excellent eight-track cartridge for those who like country music. Charley has built up quite a following around the country since he first burst upon the scene only a few years ago. "She's Too Good to Be True" is the highlight of this selection but there are other good tunes, such as "A Good Hearted Woman" and "I'm Building Bridges."
